—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

HODGE, Cal., March 5.

CONGRESS HAS gone home for the summer. No extra session and high finance feels happier. Congress does little to frighten even a mouse, but it MIGHT do something, and finance is nervous just now, jumpy in fact, looking back over its stock-issuing jobs during the boom.

PRESIDENT HOOVER, vetoing the Muscle Shoals bill, goes on record against any plan to have Uncle Sam engage in business. The President declares that the bill "raises squarely the issue of federal government ownership and operation of power and manufacturing business." He is against that, vetoes the bill, and Congress, glad of an excuse, lets the veto stand.

OTHER ISSUES are raised in that bill and the veto. Is government ownership and operation objectionable because it is wicked in itself or because the nation's water-power resources and profits belong by divine will to private individuals?

If the latter, should not the private individuals at least pay to harness the power? The people have spent $150,000,000 at Muscle Shoals. Will they get their money back, with interest, from those to whom the government ultimately delivers the public property? The answer to that is NO.

THERE IS also the question of government honesty and efficiency. If it had been said that the bill was vetoed because our government is not sufficiently honest or capable to run a power and fertilizer plant, the average citizen would have said "amen," remembering recent government efforts to relieve the farmers and the unemployed.

IT IS FORTUNATE that our government's lack of honesty and capacity was not admitted before the people's postoffice got started. On the present theory, of course, you would be told that the government must not manage a letter and parcel post business, and you would be paying $1 at least to send a letter from Miami to Seattle.

What evidence is there of that? This much. England owns its own telegraph system, and sends telegrams for sixpence a distance that would cost 80 cents in this country. And, while we like to think we do everything better than foreigners can do it, it must be added that the English government-owned telegraph is far more efficient than ours. And our system would not carry a telegram even two blocks for sixpence.

There are two sides to government ownership. Whenever our people get ready they can try the other side. But that takes thinking and will power.

DR. C. G. SHAW, who specializes in culture, art and such things, says women soon will write all the best books and paint the best pictures. The statement pleases ladies, does no harm, is absolutely inaccurate and will remain inaccurate for centuries.

Nature arranges our work. Men work externally, women work internally. Women will continue to produce the capable men and the men will continue to produce the greatest books and pictures.

That need not annoy women. Michelangelo, creating his Moses, or decorating the Sistine Chapel, is no greater than the mother that produced him. He is her work, as the Moses is his work. It is, at the same time, her mental grandchild.

WHEN THE WORLD is fully populated, each woman limited strictly to two children, science, as predicted by Haldane, may find a way to make child-bearing much simpler and easier, and the gestation term two-thirds shorter. Then women may become, even in practical external things, equal or superior to men.

Women have greater power than men, which enables them to produce several men. Caruso was a nineteenth child.

WITH THE passing of time, men may degenerate, like the male of the parasite crab, interestingly described by Darwin. The female crab, huge and self-sufficient, carries the male, as big as a 10-cent piece, under one of her flippers, and he lives happily in there.

Ten million years hence, the fully developed female human may open her vanity case, take out an eager little creature, her husband, and say to her Brobdignagian sister, "Don't you think he is cunning?" Ten million years ago, the male parasite crab was as big as his wife, or bigger, and no parasite at all. We little know what surprises nature has in store for us.

NEW YORK newspapers continue to advertise Chicago as the city of crime, although Chicago, as proved by statistics, stands far from the top as a crime center. New York's newspapers also relate the interesting story of a New York woman strangled to death after she threatened to tell about police corruption. That has not yet happened in Chicago, where killings are confined to men, and usually to thugs.

To make the death of the miserable New York woman more tragic, there comes news of her daughter's suicide. The unfortunate girl, 16 years old, could not stand the mockery of

Bischoff Discloses Threats On Life After Daughter's Suicide; No Clue in Killing

International News Service.

CAMDEN, N. J., March 5.—John E. C. Bischoff, father of Benita Bischoff, the 16-year-old high school girl who killed herself on Tuesday, and the former husband of Vivian Gordon, slain New York ex-showgirl, has received letters threatening his life since the deaths of the two women.

He revealed the threats today, after a police guard was placed over his home along White Horse pike at Audubon, N. J.

The notoriety which Benita tried to escape by snuffing out her life with gas has brought hordes of curious and many threatening letters to the Bischoff home, Bischoff said. In desperation he appealed for the guard last night.

DENIES PART IN KILLING

Most of the letters are from "cranks," but some of them, he feared, may have more serious import.

There are friends of the slain Broadway "butterfly," whose strangled form was found in Van Cortlandt Park in New York City, who believe he had something to do with the killing, Bischoff said. He added:

"I don't know a thing about the death of my former wife, and I repeat my innocence of the charges that I framed her when she was sent to Bedford reformatory nine years ago as a result of disclosures by the New York vice squad."

CLOSES GIRL'S DIARY

Bischoff revealed also that he had made enemies during his term as superintendent of the District of Columbia Reformatory at Lorton, Va., where he is stationed now.

Referring again to the death of his daughter, he said:

"I would have done anything to have spared my daughter from the knowledge of her mother's career, and I am going to protect her now in death from the notoriety she attempted to escape."

He refused to permit further

TERMS GIVEN 3 OFFICIALS IN LUZERNE

Elimination of Bids Held Criminal by High Court; Case Like Pittsburgh's

For awarding a contract involving more than $300 without calling for competitive bids, the County Commissioners of Luzerne County have been removed from office, fined $100 and sentenced to a year in jail.

The Superior Court has just handed down a decision upholding the conviction and sentence.

There is a striking parallel between the facts in the Luzerne County case and the allegations as to the manner in which contracts for the purchase of supplies for the city of Pittsburgh were made by Bertram L. Succop as director of supplies under Mayor Charles H. Kline.

The law, as laid down by the Superior Court, seems to apply to the local situation.

When Judge George V. Moore, presiding judge of Criminal Court, was shown the Superior Court's opinion, he said he was very familiar with the case and added:

"It is good common law, but further than that, I have nothing to say."

"MISBEHAVIOR" CHARGED

The Luzerne County commissioners were charged with "misbehavior in office."

The court finds that since it was a mandatory duty of the commissioners to put in writing all contracts involving the expenditure of more than $300 and to advertise for bids and to award the contract to the lowest and best bidder, and as the defendants admitted they had not done so, the law was not complied with.

In this connection a Supreme Court decision is quoted:

"A law requiring municipal work to be advertised and given to the lowest responsible bidder is mandatory."

COURT'S OPINION

The Superior Court comments as follows:

"Private negotiations and favoritism are always to be avoid-

PROSECUTOR, JURIST CONFER

Presentment to Grand Jury Likely If Council Fails To Hold Investigation

A grand jury investigation of the city's Department of Supplies appeared more likely than ever today with the announcement by Judge George V. Moore, presiding judge in Criminal Court, that he and District Attorney Andrew T. Park have been discussing such an inquiry for a week.

Judge Moore, in a statement today, said:

"If legal justification for an inquiry is disclosed, a grand jury inquiry will be ordered by myself, in the capacity of presiding judge of Quarter Sessions Court.

"District Attorney Park conferred with me one week ago as to a possible grand jury inquiry in this matter, and has since continued to confer with me, and Mr. Park has advised that he is considering the possible presentation of a petition for a grand jury inquiry in the event Pittsburgh's City Council, acting as the Council and not as a committee of Council, determines not to conduct an open councilmanic investigation.

SEES HIGH COST

"The underlying purpose of a grand jury investigation, of course, would be to determine whether there is foundation for criminal prosecution, and an inquiry of this type should be conducted soley to that end.

"A grand jury inquiry would likely entail a large public expenditure and should not be haphazardly undertaken or conducted. It seems but reasonable that a reliable and trustworthy audit of the Pittsburgh City Supplies Department's activities would afford the proper substantial groundwork for a grand jury inquiry."

This afternoon District Attorney Park made this statement:

"I have read the statement of the Hon. Judge George V. Moore, presiding judge of Quarter Sessions Court, in regard to his attitude towards a grand jury inquiry into alleged irregularities in the awarding of contracts by the Department of Supplies of the City of Pittsburgh. As indicated by Judge Moore in his statement, I have kept in constant touch with newspaper reports of developments, and from time to time during the past 10 days have conferred with the court as to possible action.

"I have repeatedly stated to the press that it is not my policy to indicate in advance actions that I propose taking in any matter than comes before me, but prefer rather giving out information after things have been accomplished. However, I may properly say at this time that I have no inclination to shirk in any way responsibility which my public office entails.

WILL KEEP FAITH

"I intend to keep faith with the public and with the judges of the court by whom I was appointed, in all matter that come before me. The case of the Department of Supplies offers no exception to my general policy. I believe I can add nothing further to the clear exposition of the situation already made by Judge Moore."

Civic organizations and taxpayers interested in investigation of the City Department of Supplies were waiting today to see what city officials will do.

If Council as a body continues to refuse an investigation, and if there is no effort to seek restitution for money spent on high-bid contracts in the Department of Supplies, then a grand jury airing appears certain, according to John D. Houston, who first brought food buying to the attention of Council.

The executive committee of the League of Women Voters met today and before the meeting had concluded Mrs. J. O. Miller issued this statement:

"We have decided to stay in the food investigation fight to a finish. We have not decided

100 ON ISLAND IN GALE'S PATH

NEW YORK, March 5.—(INS.)—Heavy gales lashed the Atlantic Ocean today, imperiling 100 residents of a small island off Halifax, in danger of being wiped out. One liner and a number of smaller ships also were in its path. The storm was a continuance of the gale which had caused enormous property damage along the coast from New Jersey to Maine.

The Furness-Red Cross liner Rosalind, bound for New York from St. John, flashed an SOS call today after losing her propeller in the storm. There are at least 35 passengers aboard the liner. Aid has been rushed.

Advices from Halifax stated that the lives of 100 persons were imperiled at Devil's Island, a small island five miles east of Halifax, where a 50-mile gale, accompanied by snow and rain, is prevailing. Fears were felt the island might be engulfed.

Property damage along the New England coastline aggregated more than $1,500,000. Great loss also was caused in New York City and along the New Jersey coast.

Ex-soldiers receiving loans on adjusted compensation certificates today were warned to be careful of salesmen offering money-making schemes. Regional Manager Michael J. Shortley, of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, 5118 Penn avenue issued the warning.

Shortley was joined by County Commander James Pirt, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and County Commander John B. Nicklas, Jr., American Legion. The advice was fostered through

New Attempt Made To Kill Machado

HAVANA, March 5.—(AP.)—Word reached the capital here last night that someone had fired at President Machado's private automobile today as the President neared his country place at Santiago de las Vegas, 20 miles southeast of Havana, but that the President had not been wounded. This is the latest of a series of attempts on Machado's life.

P. R. R. Coal Rate Increase Denied

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(INS.)—The proposal of the Pennsylvania Railroad to increase freight rates on ground or pulverized coal, in carloads, from points in Pittsburgh and Johnstown, Pa., groups, to New England destinations, today was held by the Interstate Commerce Commission to be unjustified.

For a haul of 661 miles the present rate is 21.5 cents per 100 pounds, while the proposed rate was 30.5 cents.

Jailed in Default Of $40,000 Security

LISBON, O., March 5.—Earl Edwards, former clerk of the East Liverpool Municipal Court, who is awaiting trial on an indictment charging embezzlement of $20,212.42 in court funds, was held in the Columbiana County jail here in default of $20,000 bond. Efforts of relatives and friends to raise the double security, or $40,000 property valuation, have proved futile.

Weissmuller, appearing at a local swimming pool and Miss Arnst, who is featured performer at the Embassy Club, said their romance began the past St. Valentine's Day. They motored to Fort Lauderdale last Saturday and were married. Julien Johnson and George Murphy, dancers, accompanied them.

HER MAN'S TOGS 'LOTS OF FUN'

Mrs. Dorothy Nicholson, 22, told Magistrate T. D. Jones in Morals Court, today she was having "lots of fun" hitch-hiking, attired in men's clothing, with her husband, George, from Champaign, Ill., to Elizabeth, N. J.

The two were arrested in Homewood yesterday when an officer detected the young woman's disguise. The husband testified they were on their way to his wife's uncle in Elizabeth, hoping to get work. They left a 14-month-old baby with her parents in Champaign, he said.

The two were turned over to social workers who said they would fit out the young mother with feminine apparel and try to arrange for their transportation to Elizabeth.

Peace Now Until 72nd Congress Investigates 71st

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Seventy-first Congress ended in a blaze of filibustering.

Mr. Curtis brought a gavel down on his desk, just missing some very important feet. It was over. Senator Thomas was interrupted in the middle of a speech. Their laughter turned to amazement when the waiter walked to the organ and played "Il Trovatore" without letting go of the handle. Then the Marine Band marched in and played while Ruth Bryan Owen sang.

What kind of a Congress is that? Starts with a prayer and ends with vaudeville.

One of its final acts was to proclaim the "Star Spangled Banner" as our national anthem. This poem breathes such hate and defiance that it was considered a little too manly four our next war. We have been singing it now for 123

CITY PURCHASED HIGH BID PAINT

The highest bidder has the best chance of selling the city its paint supplies, a check of the records of the Department of Supplies indicates.

The city paid $27 more than the low bid on one barrel of paint, the records show, and in many instances accepted and paid for larger amounts than contracts called for.

There is no evidence that any effort was made to buy paint supplies in quantities that would invite low bulk prices but purchases instead were made almost daily and in scores of instances on a retail basis. Three companies get the bulk of the business, all of which is apparently bought in lots of less than $500 which makes advertising for bids unnecessary.

Purchases of paint for use at the city home and hospital at Mayview go to the highest bidder just as did food purchases for that institution.

In one instance paint supplies for Mayview, totaling $332.92, were purchased from the Pitts-

Smoot Expects Deficit, But Sees No Tax Raise

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(INS.)—While conceding a Treasury deficit of $500,000,000 on July 1, Senator Reed Smoot (Rep.), of Utah, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, this afternoon declared there would be no increase in federal taxes next year.

Smoot said he expected American business would recover from the depression in the next 12 months, thus increasing federal revenues to such an extent as to avoid a tax increase when the next Congress assembles in December. He declared there were numerous signs of a return to normal business activity.

Smoot said "lack of confidence" had been as much responsible for the business depression as "over production." Conditions became bad when people, with steady income, stopped buying. He said conditions now revealed a "revival of confidence" and expressed the opinion that business would recover with conditions improving during the rest of the year.

Thompson, Widow Here Evade Marriage Rumor

A Pittsburgh widow today declined to discuss a report that she had been married more than a year ago to Josiah V. Thompson, erstwhile millionaire coal baron and banker of Uniontown, Pa., who recently served a one-week jail sentence for contempt of court.

Thompson, at his imposing home on the outskirts of Uniontown, was equally uncommunicative. He declared, tartly, over the telephone, that he didn't "want to be bothered with any such nonsense."

The report, apparently backed by records of the marriage license clerk at New Cumberland, W. Va., had it that Thompson and the widow, both giving their addresses as Cleveland, O., had taken out a license and were wed by a Presbyterian minister there, December 14, 1929.

Andrew Thompson, son of the 70-year-old former banker, said he knew nothing of his father's reported third marriage.

whether to ask a grand jury investigation. The executive committee has appointed a special committee of six which will have power to act."

TRADE BOARDS WAIT

Dr. A. L. Lewin, a director of the Allied Board of Trade, said today that the board will take a hand in helping to clean up the Department of Supplies charges. He said:

"I have no doubt that the Allied Boards of Trade will enter this fight and do everything in its power to clean up the mess. Whoever is guilty of wrong-doing must face the music. The matter will be presented before the board of directors at its next meeting."

The Civic Club of Allegheny County is watching the developments in the food purchasing investigation, Maurice R. Schaiff, president, said today.

"We have considered the question and have concluded that the time hasn't arrived for us to take action. We're watching it and will step in if we see that we can be of help."

Col. William R. Dunlap has accepted the appointment of director of the Department of Supplies offered him by Mayor Charles H. Kline. His name will be sent to City Council for confirmation Monday.

The Mayor's appointee commented:

"I do not have the job yet, as Council first must pass on the appointment. As for the mess in the director's office, I will say that it is water over the dam and no concern of mine."

WAR-TIME OFFICER

Col. Dunlap resides at 301 Moore avenue, Knoxville. His war record includes on the Mexican border in 1917 and with the A. E. F. in France. He participated in five major offensives of the World War, going overseas a captain and returning a colonel in command of the One Hundred Ninth Infantry.

He was the youngest colonel in the American Army. He was awarded the silver star citation by Gen. Pershing for gallantry in action and later the Distinguished Service Medal. He has had considerable sales experience with large companies.

AUDIT WELCOMED

Although refused a public investigation by Council, the heads of the league were pleased by the announcement of Dr. James P. Kerr, city controller, that an outside firm of public accountants would start an audit of the books of the Supplies Department covering a period of six years.

Controller Kerr today said his audit of the Supplies Department records, originally intended to start today, would not begin until next week. More money is needed than he has available to make an extended audit, he said. Additional funds must come from Council.

The Controller, Charles Sable, food inspector of the controller's office, and John Lang, chief clerk of the Supplies Department, today visited the produce yards, Eighteenth and Pike streets, and inspected green goods supplied city institutions.

Kerr said he was satisfied that the produce of the Agricultural Exchange, usually the low bidder, was of high quality.

Lang awarded contracts to the Agricultural Exchange on its low bid for supplying produce the coming week to these institutions: Municipal Hospital, $25.20; Leech Farm, $69.90; Mayview, $45.10.

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, chairman of the league, and her sister, Mrs. J. O. Miller, member of the executive committee, conferred with Controller Kerr yesterday and praised his plan. The decision for an audit came in spite of an opinion from City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt that an audit would be unnecessary because the Department of Supplies handled no funds.

WOULD ATTEND AUDIT

Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Miller before their interview with Dr. Kerr both said they would be pleased to be present while the audit was in progress. Afterward they said an invitation had not been extended.

A summary of the latest developments in the food investigation will be given to members of the Friday Morning Club of the league on March 13, Mrs. Smith said.

The audit will be conducted by a firm whose identity has not been disclosed. The records will be removed from the controller's office on the first floor of the City-County Building to the Department of Supplies on the sixth floor.

Asked why he did not conduct the audit in his office instead of moving the records up six flights of stairs, Dr. Kerr said:

"My office is not under investigation. We only hold the supplies department records. This is a probe into that department. Well, it's only natural and fitting that we should conduct the audit in that office."

Dr. Kerr pointed out yesterday that certain types of confirming orders offer the only practical method of buying goods for the city on an economic basis. He said that such things as green goods and hay may be purchased direct as emergency orders with his approval.

JOBLESS AID

The plan for the relief of unemployment will also require confirming orders for materials to keep the workmen busy, he declared.

An explanation of "confirming orders" for materials which Controller Kerr refused to ratify for the Department of Public Works has been made by Director Edward G. Lang after a conference with W. C. Batchelor, superintendent of the bureau of recreation, and James Moore, superintendent of parks.

Batchelor told Lang an order for 12 cases of cleaning compound, costing $86.40, was duplicated by reason of an error of the firm supplying it. This was not discovered until a portion of the extra order was used, and as the bureau was in need of the material a confirming order was submitted.

Oil was purchased for McKinley Park roads last summer in order to relieve the dust nuisance. A confirming order was used to obtain the material quickly.

burgh Paint & Supply Company at a total unit rate of $21.62.

Had the city accepted the lowest bids on the items of the order the unit rate would have been $20.15. The difference, when multiplied by the large quantities purchased, indicates a large and needless expenditure.

Bids of the Pittsburgh Paint Company as compared with others bidders in the record of the Mayview job, are:

	Pgh. Paint	Standard Plate	Lawrence Co.	Thompson Co.	C. A. Michel Co.

18 lb. fir paint	2.47	....	2.15	....	....

LOW OFFERS IGNORED

Other phases of paint contracts letting were:

Purchase of 30 gallons of Barreled Sunlight enamel from the C. A. Michel Company on a bid of $3.10 a gallon. Lower bidders, who, according to the record, were ignored, were the Thompson Company, which bid $2.20 a gallon, and the Standard Plate Glass Company, which bid $2.95.

Letting of a contract for six dozen brushes for bridge painting to the Michel Company on a bid of $38.10 a dozen, when the James Sipe Company bid $35 a dozen.

Preference of the Pittsburgh Paint and Supply Company over the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company on respective bids of $2.28 a gallon for two gallons of coach varnish, against $1.98; 36 cents a pound for five pounds of chrome yellow, against 32 cents; 36 cents for chrome orange against 32 cents.

PAID WITHOUT PROTEST

According to the records delivery of more material than the contracts called for was not protested, and the city always paid the bill. In each of three instances uncovered, the Michels company delivered larger quantities than the city ordered.

One order revealed the city contracted for 50 gallons of interior white gloss, and the Michels company delivered 62½ gallons; on the same order 62 gallons of interior cream gloss was delivered on an order for 50 gallons increasing the expenditure of $670 as indicated by the bids, to $803.

Again, when 250 gallons of aluminum bronze in oil was contracted for from the Michels company for $250.50, the company delivered 263 gallons at a cost of $307.71.

Still another instance was found in an order for 26 gallons of interior gloss, at $26.70. The company delivered 30 gallons for $88.50. The city paid.

THREE FIRMS GET ALL

Receipted bills on file in the controller's office disclosed the city confined its paint purchases largely to the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, the Pittsburgh Paint & Supply and the C. A. Michel Company.

The purchases were made almost daily under the policy of buying paint materials as needed. Purchases ranged from one pound or gallon to hundreds of pounds or gallons. In no instance was it evident that the city profited by the opportunity to save by bulk purchasing.

BRIDGE SLAYING NOT 1ST DEGREE

KANSAS CITY, March 5.—(INS.)—Possible conviction of first degree murder will not be included in the instructions Judge Ralph S. Latshaw will give to the jury in the trial of Mrs. Myrtle A. Bennett for the slaying of her husband during a bridge game quarrel.

Disclosure of the omission of first degree murder from the instructions was made by Prosecutor James R. Page, who after two and a half hours of conference with Judge Latshaw and former Senator James A. Reed, stormed out of the judge's chambers and exclaimed:

"I'm disgusted with the proceedings."

He then explained that he had been overruled by Judge Latshaw in his efforts to have first degree murder included in the instructions.

With the apparent wrangling over preparation of the instructions it appeared improbable that even the closing argument of the state and defense would be reached today unless a night session is held.

RASKOB URGES STATE LIQUOR CONTROL

Democratic Chairman Makes Appeal After Avoiding Issue at First Session

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP.)—State liquor control was advocated before the Democratic National Committee this afternoon by Chairman Raskob.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The extraordinary meeting of the Democratic National Committee, which Chairman John J. Raskob called to "discuss finances and future policies," got under way here today with the much-shot-at Mr. Raskob in the chair.

It had been anticipated that the "future policies" would include prohibition, but hardly had the delegates settled back in their chairs until the anti-dry chairman of the Democratic National Committee relieved the fears of the Southern drys that he had any deep or dark designs to force it to go on records on the issue.

PLANS RESOLUTIONS

At the same time, however, he made it clear that he is going to propose a set of resolutions for the members of the national committee to ponder over, and perhaps at some future time to recommend to the national convention 16 months hence. Presumably, one of these proposals will be that the party take a militant stand against prohibition. With a slight smile today, however, he said:

"But I hope that there will be no attempt to force action at this meeting."

There was loud applause from the Southern drys, who were represented in force at the meeting by congressmen and senators sitting on the sidelines.

Raskob was smiling and urbane when he called the session to order half an hour late. Ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, the party's 1928 candidate for the presidency, did not attend the meeting. He was holding court in his suite in another part of the hotel, jovial and friendly with all the Democrats who crowded in and out of his apartment.

It is well known that Chairman Raskob and Gov. Smith have small patience with the element of the party that would submerge free and frank discussion of party issues, Smith said today:

FOR DEFINITE STAND

"If the time ever comes that the Democratic party is afraid to discuss anything that affects the health, welfare and business of every citizen of the country, then the party has ceased to be Democratic and becomes Republican."

"Al" dismissed all talk of a rift between himself and Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, as "newspaper talk." Yet asked the blunt question of whether he favored the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt in 1932, he hesitated and then replied evenly:

"I don't think that I should be asked such a question at this time. The nominee in 1932 will be decided by a greater authority than I am, and that is the national convention."

HOUSE OPENS UTILITIES PROBE

Father Curran, on Stand Charges Service Board Ignored Citizens' Protest

BULLETIN.

HARRISBURG, March 5.—Asserting he had advised his people against paying exorbitant rates in spite of the law, Msgr. J. J. Curran asserted that "seeds of revolution are being sown by such abuses of the poor," in testifying regarding rates of the Scranton-Spring Brook Water Company.

By ED PRENDERGAST,
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, March 5.—The Rt. Rev. Msgr. J. J. Curran charged that the Public Service Commission completely ignored any testimony other than that of the Scranton-Spring Brook Water Service Company engineers as the House committee investigation of public utilities was launched today. The white-haired priest declared:

"The company's attitude was that of vultures who fly above the earth with their eyes cast down upon the innocent and swoop down to gobble up everything."

WATER SHUT OFF

Father Curran, before 2,000 of his people from the Scranton-Wilkes-Barre district, was the first witness before the Moore Committee. He testified that 600 towns had been deprived of water by the company shutting off the supply, and added:

"At this the people organized and struck terror into the hearts of the company. The company was forced to halt shutting off the supply and decided not try to collect extra rates.

"There is danger ahead if the company tries to halt the supply again, then there will be trouble."

Msgr. Curran and his followers arrived here this afternoon in 30 buses. Representative D. Glenn Moore, chairman of the committee, delayed opening the hearing three hours until they arrived.

The Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Pittsburgh, and H. J. Crawford are sitting as two of the "representatives of the public" on the committee.

Answering a question by Father Cox as to what he thought of officials of the water company, Msgr. Curran declared:

"They are dishonest, I'm convinced, and—Lord save us—public liars."

Questioned for a remedy to the difficult situation and exorbitant rates, Msgr. Curran said:

"We are going to present a bill here demanding authority to take our water works and have municipal ownership.

"If the men were honest, or had sense to compromise, going back to the old rates would temporarily throw oil on the soothing water."

SENATE CONTINUES QUIZ

Meanwhile, the Senate committee continued its separate utility investigation with former Congressman John R. Farr, of Scranton, as its principal witness.

Farr was threatened with contempt proceedings and appealed to as a responsible, honorable citizen, when he refused to divulge the name of a Scranton banker who gave him information relative to alleged collusion between Wall street and the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania.

CONGRESSMEN START HOME

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP.)—Free from parliamentary worries for nine long months, most members of Congress were homeward bound today, but an unusually large number were detained in Washington. Senator Reed, of Pennsylvania, will leave in a few days for Bermuda.

Vice President Curtis departed for a 10-day vacation at Miami. Speaker Longworth will remain here until May.

Republican Leader Watson, of the Senate, is remaining here for the present, with future plans indefinite. Democratic Leader Robinson also is staying for a couple of weeks, but plans to return to Arkansas soon, and he may go to Europe later.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, will remain probably until the hot weather arrives. Senator Norris, of Nebraska, will stay here until after the Progressive conference next week and then return to Nebraska. Senator Fess, of Ohio, probably will alternate between his home and his job here as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

NO CLUE, POLICE BAFFLED

Meanwhile, with New York police completely baffled in their search for clues to the slayers, indications today were that the "Vivian Gordon murder" soon may be listed with other "unsolved" crimes such as the "Dot" King mystery, the Louise Lawson murder, the Elwell case and the Arnold Rothstein murder.

The parade of 200 men and women whose names were found in Miss Gordon's diaries continued before the investigating grand jury. Police are inclined to disregard the theory that she was slain to prevent "telling all" before the Seabury inquiry investigating alleged "framing" of women on vice charges.

Mayor James J. Walker said he was shocked at the vice inquiry revelations, and it was understood Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt had asked for a complete report of the murder investigation.

OTHER NATIONS lack the "docility" that so impressed the late Lord Northcliffe when he came here. Said he:

"The American people are very docile."

He was impressed by our obedience when ordered to stop eating sugar because Europe wanted it. What Northcliffe said of our people is also true of our government, which takes orders about its Navy, war, gas, etc., very humbly.

NOT SO with Japan. The London naval treaty "allotted" to Japan 52,000 tons of submarines. Now it develops that France is to have 80,000 tons of submarines, and Japan says:

"Wait a minute, not so fast, we need time to think it over."

Uncle Sam, like a good tar baby, says nothing. Whatever they allot is good enough for him. He was not like that before international finance, eager to curry favor abroad, did his thinking for him.

Coolidge Scores Heavy Congress Expenditures

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 5.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The general reaction of the country at the final adjournment of the Congress will be one of relief. When the people are in distress legislation always reflects their condition. In the national government this inconsistently took the form of spending money. Temporary help for the needy may have been justified, but large expenditures only delay business recovery. Normal income taxes are already 1 per cent higher than last year and a prospective deficit threatens a large increase in taxes. New debts seem impending.

Mr. Coolidge

The Congress threw away a great opportunity to help the people. If it had granted all necessary relief and then by a policy of rigid economy reduced governmental costs, avoided a deficit and more debt, the country would have looked on it as a savior.

Politics is always present. Probably there were those who thought they would profit politically by being able to charge that business is bad and taxes and debt have been increased. Those making the charge in the future will have to explain what constructive measures they proposed to revive business, promote economy, and reduce taxes and debt. These voting for the largest peace-time expenditures any Congress ever authorized cannot escape responsibility.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Film Actress Broadcasts Style Hints to Women

LOS ANGELES, March 5.—(Universal.)—Constance Bennett does not spend $250,000 a year on clothes. Why, if she did, it would be necessary for her to buy diamond-studded dresses and emerald-trimmed kimonos. That is what the film star told Miss Louella Parsons in a delightful radio interview.

Miss Parsons asked the question because of a magazine article which stated that Miss Bennett's wardrobe cost a quarter of a million a year.

And, Miss Bennett informed Miss Parsons, if anyone wants to be smartly dressed, the thing to do is to wear black or white evening frocks, made simply. She said:

"The simpler you dress, the smarter you are."

Radio listeners throughout the United States yesterday tuned in on the Sunkist broadcast to hear this popular young star tell her ideas of styles, marriage and careers.

Each week Miss Parsons interviews a famous star. Next week Ann Harding, star of "East Lynne," "Holiday," and other popular pictures, will be the guest star. Miss Harding and Miss Parsons will have many interesting things to talk about.

GREETINGS OF THE COMING EASTER SEASON FROM THE THROATS OF 48-HOUR-OLD CHICKS: THEY'RE LEGHORNS

MAL DAUGHERTY FOUND GUILTY

WASHINGTON COURTHOUSE, O., March 5. — (INS.) — Mal S. Daugherty, president of the defunct Ohio State Bank and brother of former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, today faced a heavy fine and a prison term. He was found guilty yesterday of misusing funds of the bank.

The indictment on which the banker was convicted contained five counts, each carrying a heavy fine and imprisonment for from one to 10 years. He was found guilty on each count.

The 65-year-old banker at the trial denied the charges and blamed other bankers for collapse of the institution he headed.

Truck Hits Train, Road Gets Damages

MONTICELLO, N. Y., March 5. —(AP.)—Four years ago the truck of Isadore Mintz crashed into the side of a locomotive on a grade crossing. He sued the Ontario and Western Railroad for damages and lost. Then the railroad sued him for damaging the locomotive and yesterday a jury awarded $991 to the road.

200 Cocoanuts Liquor Laden, Owner Held

CLEVELAND, March 5.—(AP.)—Police who found 200 cocoanuts in the apartment of George Davies, 64, decided there was monkey business somewhere.

So they arrested Davies, charging the nuts were filled with liquor made by man instead of by nature.

They took also 211 gallons of alcohol and estimated the value of their haul at $5,000.

MARRIAGE DRAB TO WHITEMAN

CHICAGO, March 5.—(AP.)—Marriage, says Paul Whiteman, is a middle-class institution. And the orchestra leader, whose third union has just been dissolved by divorce, added:

"At any rate it seems to work best for those of the average mode—somewhere between the hod-carrier and the banker."

Master of modern music, pioneer of concert jazz who added a symphonic touch to the post-war dance lyrics, Whiteman found himself unable to incorporate into his private life the music which responds to his baton. As a sigh traversed his 250-pound frame and referring to Vanda Hoff, the dancer he married in 1922, he said:

"'Van' was right. I'm married to a dance band."

HUNTINGDON, Pa., March 5.—(AP.)—While being returned from Salt Lake City to Eastern Penitentiary in Philadelphia, Alfred McGaw, of Sunbury, Pa., escaped today from two guards by leaping from a Pennsylvania Railroad train, between Tyrone and Huntingdon. McGaw was being returned for violation of parole after serving 19 months in a Utah prison for automobile thefts.

GANDHI ORDERS INDIA PEACE

LONDON, March 5.—(INS.)—Simultaneously with publication of the terms of his agreement with Viceroy Lord Irwin, Mahatma Gandhi today called off his civil disobedience campaign against British rule, according to dispatches received here. He also instructed his followers to abandon their campaign for complete abolition of taxes.

BOMBAY, March 5.—(INS.)—Terms of Mahatma Gandhi's agreement with Lord Irwin follow closely the forecasts made by International News Service last Monday. Gandhi promises to discontinue boycott of British goods as a political weapon, and unmolested sale and purchase of British commodities will be restored.

The agreement gives Gandhi a signal victory in his campaign against the British salt tax, one of the principal causes of his opposition to continued British rule. Residents of the salt areas of India, particularly the poor, will be permitted to collect and manufacture salt from sea water for domestic consumption or sale within their own villages.

Stimson Shuts Off Anti-Fascist Fuss

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP.)—Secretary Stimson, in a letter to Dr. Charles Fama, New York anti-Fascist leader, has closed so far as the State Department is concerned the recent agitation directed against Ambassador de Martino, of Italy.

After the Secretary had declined to receive a group of Italian-Americans desiring a public hearing on charges that the ambassador, who is a Fascist, they forwarded to President Hoover through Senator Copeland (Dem.), New York, a letter on the subject.

Hoover to Name 129 Postmasters

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(INS.)—President Hoover will be obliged to fill 129 postmasterships by recess appointments since the Senate failed to confirm 300 postmaster nominations before it expired yesterday.

Meanwhile, a score of bills passed by Congress rested on President Hoover's desk for his signature if they meet with his approval. Among them is the bill of Senator Wagner (Dem.), of New York, which established a system of federal and state employment agencies.

Russell, English Author, Given Earl's Title

LONDON, March 5.—(AP.)—The British peerage today had for a new member Bertrand Russell, English author and philosopher, who through the death of his brother, the oft-married second Earl Russell at Marseilles Tuesday night, becomes the third Earl Russell.

The end came suddenly to the second earl, who was known for his unorthodoxy and once was sentenced by the House of Lords to three months in prison on a charge of bigamy.

He married Mabel Scott, daughter of Sir Claude Scott, but obtained a divorce from her at Reno, Nev. While still in Nevada he married Mollie Cook, of Galway, daughter of the Bishop of Kilmore, and herself twice divorced.

When he returned to England the courts refused to uphold the Nevada divorce and he was charged with bigamy. The House of Lords trial followed.

Bertrand Russell has gained renown for the freedom of thought in his writings on mysticism, marriage and morals, international affairs and other subjects.

EXHIBIT PLANS FAIL WALES

BUENOS AIRES, March 5.—(INS.)—The Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, will reach their objective as Britain's "trade ambassadors" today with arrival here by airplane from Mar del Plata.

The royal travelers will be given an elaborate welcome, but the heir at least will find cause for disappointment in regards to the British Trade Exposition. From all indication, the project will be far from completed by March 14, the day set for the official opening.

The American Club of Buenos Aires, which on the previous occasion of the Prince's visit here entertained him so well that he left London determined to renew his acquaintance with those "American roughnecks," today shared the disappointment of many social leaders who learned the royal guests would not be available for a convivial evening together.

Monks to Restore Historic Mission

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 5.—(AP.)—The Very Rev. Vincent Schrempp, provisional of the Chicago province of the Franciscan Order, announced today Mission San Jose, historic shrine of two centuries would be restored to its original form.

A large monastery, he said, would be erected near it for the accommodation of Franciscan friars who are returning to hold services in San Antonio after an absence of nearly 100 years. He arrived here yesterday to take part in the bicentennial celebration of the founding of the city.

EINSTEIN SAILS FOR HOME

NEW YORK, March 5.—(Universal.)—With impressions of quiet days spent at the Mt. Wilson Observatory in California, and the vast works of nature in Arizona and New Mexico as his most cherished memories of the United States, Prof. Albert Einstein last night said goodbye to America.

Einstein took with him to Germany hundreds of gifts, the most prized of which are five violins, splinters of petrified wood from Arizona, and a woven basket given by an Indian woman in New Mexico, but he left behind something far more valuable.

This was the original manuscript, written in German, and given by an anonymous donor to Yale. It is a recapitulation of Einstein's theory of relativity.

At a testimonial dinner in his honor in Hotel Astor last night, Dr. Einstein heard himself acclaimed by his 700 hosts as "the greatest living Jew."

Ireland to Be Dry On St. Patrick's Day

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, March 5.—(AP.)—St. Patrick's Day again will be bone dry in the Free State, as successive postponements of a pending liquor bill have so reduced the time available it cannot become law by March 17.

The bill was introduced that citizens of the Free State might be able to observe the ancient custom of "drowning the rock" in alcoholic beverages on this great day, for in recent years there has been prohibition over St. Patrick's Day, Good Friday and Christmas.

ELECTION BOARD TRIAL STARTS

With the defense fighting every move to have the ballot boxes brought in, the trial of the Election Board of the Fifteenth District, Sixth Ward, got under way today before Judge James H. Gray in Criminal Court. The jury was locked up at the noon recess.

The defendants, Robert Drzewiecki, Stanley Zbikowski, Frank J. Skibo, Joseph Bentz and Frank Szoszolek, are charged with conspiracy in returning a false count at the May primaries, 1930. They are represented by Attorney Charles B. Prichard. Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk is prosecuting the case.

Soviet Army Chief Arrested as Traitor

BERLIN, March 5.—(AP.)—A Telegraphic Union dispatch from Warsaw said that word had come from Habarowski, in East Siberia, of the arrest of Gen. Bluecher, commanding the Soviet forces in the Far East.

He was charged, the reports said, with conspiring with a Ukrainian national organization to foster insurrection in the army and establish an anti-Soviet military dictatorship.

TRUST CO., BANK IN MERGER

The Dollar Savings Bank and Trust Company, on the North Side, has been consolidated with the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company. The transfer of ownership took place last night.

The merged bank will be known as the Dollar Savings and Trust Branch of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company. It will continue operations at its recently remodeled banking quarters at 524 Federal street, with its present staff of officers and employes. The directors will continue to act as a board of advisers.

The Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust has had a substantial interest in the Dollar Savings for many years and had been represented on the board of directors. The North Side institution is one of the oldest banks in that vicinity, having been organized in 1890.

The merger is in keeping with the policy of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company to form branches of the institutions in which it had interests. This has resulted in several similar mergers in the past year.

The Dollar Savings and Trust Company had total assets of $16,290,000 on December 31 and the Peoples-Pittsburgh had total assets of over $100,000,000 on the same date. The total combined assets now amount to about $118,000,000, with an invested capital of over $23,000,000.

All the stock of the Second National Bank, at Federal street and Parkway, North Side, except directors' shares, is owned by the Dollar Savings and Trust Company. The consolidation will place this control in the hands of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company, but the Second National will not be merged with the other institutions.

Banker Appointed Drought Loan Head

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(INS.)—Lewis T. Tune, of St. Louis, today was appointed by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde as chairman of the national loan committee, which will administer the $45,000,000 drought relief fund.

Tune, a director of the Joint Land and Stock Bank in St. Louis, will have his headquarters here during the administration of the fund.

'Oliver-Twist-Fagan' Trio Held in Thefts

DETROIT, March 5.—(INS.)—A 13-year-old "Oliver Twist" and his two "fagin" brothers are being held by police here today in connection with the looting of 63 homes in Palmer Woods, exclusive Detroit suburb.

With the proceeds of one of the robberies the lad is said to have taken 34 of his playmates to a downtown movie house.

Will Leaves 'Pin Money' To 'First Lady of Land'

PHILADELPHIA, March 5.—(AP.)—An annuity of $12,000 to supply "pin money" for the "First Lady of the Land" was provided in the will of Henry G. Freeman, Jr., owner of large parcels of Philadelphia real estate, who died in October, 1917.

This was revealed today when the Fidelity-Philadelphia Trust Company, executors and trustees, began an accounting because of the death of a son, William McLain Freeman, survivor of two children, who were life tenants of the residue of Henry Freeman's $2,000,000 estate.

Whether Mrs. Herbert Hoover would receive the annuity, should it be acceptable, and whether disposition of the residue to three institutions would be made in accordance with the will of the son, depend upon several questions that the Orphans' Court must decide.

The annuity to the "First Lady" is to be known as the "Henry G. Freeman, Jr., Pin Money Fund" and "shall continue in force so long as this glorious government lasts," the will provides.

Some legal experts believe the annuity to the "First Lady" is voided by the rule against perpetuities, because it was ordered to be kept in force forever.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—(AP.)—The White House has not been notified of the Freeman pin money bequest. It was said that no law exists to prevent the "First Lady" from accepting such a bequest, if she so chooses.

ATTORNEY TELLS OF WILLS

Accounting on Art Objects Not Given by Ambassador, Calvit Counsel Asserts

Defense counsel today contended that the pre-nuptial agreement between the late Ambassador Alexander P. Moore and his wife, Lillian Russell Moore, was made in New York state and the law there requires a written contract.

The agreement is the basis for the will contest by Mrs. Dorothy Russell Calvit, daughter of Moore's wife. She was left $1,000 of his $500,000 estate.

When the argument was presented today Judge Thomas P. Trimble said:

"I believe the testimony of Bessie Clayton."

Miss Clayton, retired New York actress, testified February 4 that Lillian Russell agreed to marry Moore on condition that he would provide for her daughter, and that she had overheard Moore promise he would leave her half his estate.

DAUGHTER 'EXTRAVAGANT'

Her daughter, Dorothy, was extravagant, didn't know the value of money and ought to go to work, Mrs. Moore once told her attorney, John S. Weller, Weller testified today. Moore and his wife were in Weller's office talking about their wills, Weller said, when Moore told of a cleaners' bill, for which he had been sued.

Because some of the clothes were Dorothy's Moore refused to pay, Weller said:

"Later Mrs. Moore made the remarks about her daughter, but asked him to arrange a trust fund to provide her $50 weekly, in such a way that nobody could touch it, 'not even my husband.'"

He said Mrs. Moore gave away much of her money and other assets during the war.

Moore had made the same provision for the Queen of Spain in a previous will, Weller said, under cross-examination.

According to the attorney, Mrs. Moore had once shown him a collection of ceramics, remarking it was worth $35,000. He said he had never seen other art objects.

Sara Moore Eastman, of Chicago, testified she interviewed Lillian Russell in 1911, when she was a reporter for the Detroit News, and that Lillian told her she was going to marry Moore, but expected to continue on the stage until her dependents weer provided for. There was no mention of any pre-nuptial agreement ever made to her, Mrs. M. L. Chapman, of 4362 Fillmore street, testified. Mrs. Chapman was Mrs. Moore's personal maid for many years.

Chinese art objects, including a costly Buddha statue, worth $75,000, were not accounted for by Ambassador Moore, executor for the estate of Lillian Russell Moore, Attorney Herman Pollock, of New York, testified today. He is counsel for Mrs. Calvit.

He said Lillian Russell Moore was much interested in arranging for a proper financial care for her daughter when she made her will, Attorney Weller testified.

Alma Rubens, Hopeless in Toils of Dope, Carried to Insane Asylum in Shackles

Tricked by Old Friend, She Struggles in Vain to Escape Trap

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER XXX.

All my mind, soul and body were concentrated in my ears. I listened intently with my mind made up.

The instant there was a sound that those men were going to break down the door of my refuge, I would take that sharp knife and plunge it into my throat and put an end to the whole horror.

Suddenly there was a new voice at the door—a voice I recognized.

Miss Rubens

It was an old family friend speaking — a man I had loved since I was a little 5-year-old child.

"Alma," said the voice, "my poor child, you aren't afraid of me are you? You know I wouldn't do anything to hurt you, don't you?" I began to tremble. "Oh," I sobbed. "Oh, I'm so glad you are here. Help me, please, help me!" and then I opened the door and fell straight into the arms of our old friend.

"Don't cry so Alma," he said. "I'm not here to hurt you. I'm here to help you, give me that awful knife."

I obeyed him like a little gentle child, he took the knife and put it out of my reach.

"Now, dear," he said, "What's this all about?"

Just as I began to speak two men stepped into the room. They had handcuffs and a restraining belt in their hands. I tried to get to the knife, but they were too quick for me, my battle for freedom was lost.

On the way downstairs, I turned around and called back: "Don't worry, dear, you thought you were doing every thing for the best, I forgive you."

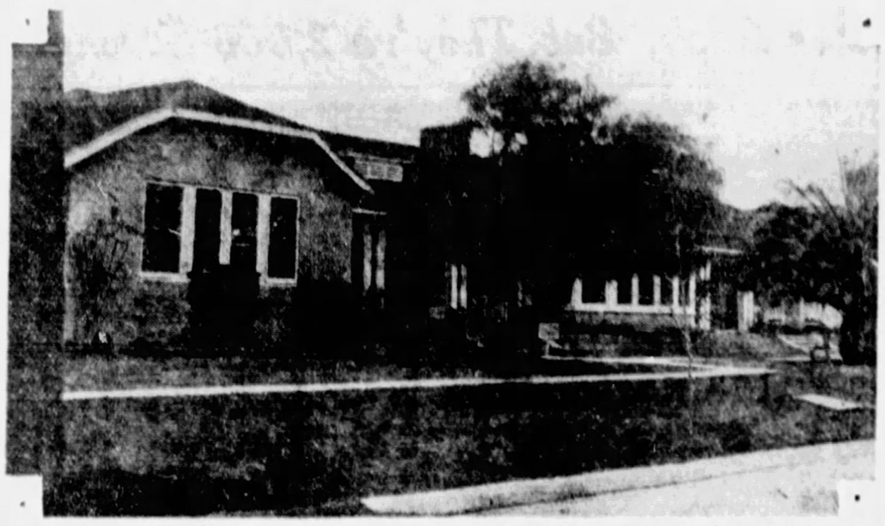
So handcuffed and bound up in the belt, I was led away to an ambulance, which an instant later started off, siren shrieking, to the psychopathic ward.

I have never heard the shriek of a siren since then without feeling again the cold clutch of the iron on my wrists.

They put me in a padded cell and left me to face my misery and disgrace alone.

The next morning without waiting to feed me or to relieve the hideous pains from my long hours without drugs, I was loaded handcuffed, and restrained into the front seat of an ambulance, the driver was on one side of me, and a strapping nurse on the other.

I had a blanket draped over my thin silk dressing gown, and the satin mules I had worn when taken from my home the previous morning, were gone.



PATTON ASYLUM: ALMA RUBENS TELLS ABOUT IT IN TODAY'S INSTALLMENT OF STORY

Face Unwashed

I had no chance to wash my face, my hair was matted into a tangled mess.

I spoke to the nurse beside me. "If I could have a comb," I said, "or maybe just a hairpin." The nurse laughed. "Never mind hairpins," she said, "you won't need no hairpins where you are going."

"Where are we going, where are you taking me?" I asked her. The nurse grinned, the driver turned his head away.

But I knew they didn't have to tell me, I knew.

Patton—the place I dreaded, more than anything in the world.

Patton, the State Asylum for the Insane.

I was faint with hunger, racked with pain, dazed and bewildered.

"I'm hungry," I moaned, "oh, I'm so hungry." The driver turned and looked at me. "I'll get you something to eat," he said. And sure enough, he did. We stopped at a fruit stand and the driver bought fruit and cigarets, which he divided with me.

The car rolled along over the smooth road, orange groves, bungalows, flowers, birds in the trees, and once a meadow lark called his gay greeting from a hedge as we went by.

I sat in a kind of tortured stupor.

Miles ahead of us, every once in a while I glimpsed a huge pile of gray stone buildings. When the road sloped downward, I lost sight of them for a time, but when we mounted another rise, there they were, nearer, easier to see, more terrifying than ever.

"Is that Patton?" I asked the driver.

He looked away—but he did not have to answer.

I knew, here I was at last, Alma Ruben's fortune's favorite, the petted star of the screen. Here I was at the last refuge of the desperate, and the helpless.

We entered the driveway, and drove up in front of the main building. I sat with the driver, while the nurse went inside.

What was the long procession, coming from a grove at the background? . . . it was like a parade of lost souls.

Living Dead

No violence, no screaming, no muttering—just walking, heads down, broken, hopeless—the pageant of the living dead.

While I sat benumbed, bewildered, in a sort of hypnotic dream, one of the asylum officials came out, took me by the arm, helped me from the car, and led me into the reception room, where he left me alone.

The instant he stepped out of the room, I heard the heavy door clang behind him. I heard a key grate in the lock.

What was the stale, icy breath that whipped soundlessly overhead?

They were coming back again, the strange creatures that were my companions before.

Tall, haggard women, bent old men with distorted faces—one held the butcher knife I had left at home in her hand. I wondered dully how she got it, and whether I could somehow, persuade her to let me have it, and make an end of the horror of living.

But Alice May was not there and I was glad of it.

I would have been sorry to see her in that dreadful place.

The horrors of the insane asylum, the cruelty of its keepers, are told by Alma Rubens in tomorrow's installment.

INCOME OTHER THAN SALARY TAXABLE

Interest, Rentals Received And Other Items Must Be Listed; Exemptions Given

This is the fourth of a series of articles on the most common problems of income tax.

Salary is only one item which must be included in your income tax return. In filling out your income tax form you must ask yourself the following questions:

Did you receive any interest on bank deposits?

Did you have any property from which you received rent?

Did you receive income from stocks or bonds?

Are you interested in any partnership from which you received income?

Have you any income from royalties or patents?

Have you any minor children who are working? If you have control of their income it must be included in your return.

All these items must be included in your income tax statement.

SOME TYPES EXEMPT

On the other hand, certain types of income are exempt from tax and need not be included. Among these are proceeds from life insurance policies, amounts received as gifts, bequests or inheritances, interest on municipal bonds, state bonds and certain bonds of the United States and Federal Farm loan bonds.

Amounts received through accident or health insurance or under workmen's compensation laws and damages received on account of injuries are also exempt from tax.

COMPENSATION UNTAXED

Amounts received as compensation, family allotments and allowances under the war-risk insurance act, the vocational rehabilitation act or the World War Veterans' act or as government or state pensions need not be reported.

Among the other exempt items are interest or dividends up to $300 received from domestic building and loan associations, the principal business of which is confined to making loans to members.

COURT UPHOLDS JAIL IN TRICK BUYING

ed, as they invariably result in disaster to the municipality. As was said in Smith v. City of Philadelphia, 227 Pa. 423, 'the infirmities of human nature, the natural disposition to favor friends, personal and political, and the various motives which influence public officers to depart from a strict and rigid adherence to the obligations that rest upon them should be held strictly within the limits of the powers conferred upon them.'"

Here are some other quotations from the Superior Court's decision:

"A conviction of misbehavior in office subjects all officers to removal.

"It would seem to follow that one who wilfully neglects to perform any duty which he is bound by statute to perform is guilty of a misdemeanor at common law, and if so, it is within the discretion of the court to impose a prison sentence if a penalty, as in this statute, is not prescribed."

"The learned court below held as a matter of law that it was a mandatory duty of the County Commissioners to put in writing all contracts involving the expenditure of more than $300 and to advertise for bids and to award the contract to the lowest and best bidder, and as the defendants admitted that they failed to do so, the law was not complied with. The jury was instructed that it was their duty to determine whether or not the County Commissioners wilfully violated the law. The court said to the jury on this phase of the case:

"'Public officers with mandatory duties to perform under the law are presumed to know the law, and if they wilfully do an act which is in violation of that mandatory duty, it becomes an indictable offense. The acts here forbidden, that is, the letting of contracts in any other manner than that provided by law, are not necessarily criminal, but become so if done wilfully or with evil intent.'

"The question then arises, do the acts charged and proven amount to an offense at common law? Blackstone in his fourth book, page 122, states: 'Disobedience to any of these commands is a high misprison and contempt; and so, lastly, is disobedience to any act of Parliament where no particular penalty is assigned, for then it is punishable like the rest of these contempts by fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the King's Courts of Justice.'

UNDER COMMON LAW

"In Com. v. Silsbee, 9 Mass. 417, cited with approval in Com. v. McHale, 97 Pa. 397 (409), the court said, 'It is a general principle that where a statute gives a privilege, and one wilfully violates such privilege, the common law will punish such violation.' A priori, a violation of a mandatory duty, would be a higher offense and, therefore, punishable. Judge Paxson in Com. v. McHale, supra, calls attention to what Blackstone said in Chapter 13 of Vol. 4, of the Sharswood Edition, in defining a common law offense — 'The last species of offences which especially affect the Commonwealth are those against the public police or economy. By the public police and economy I mean the due regulation and domestic order of the kingdom, whereby the individuals of the state, like members of a well-governed family, are bound to conform their general behavior to the rule of propriety, good neighborhood and good manners, and to be decent, industrious and inoffensive in their respective stations. This head of offences must therefore be very miscellaneous, as it comprises all such crimes as especially affect public society.'

"Wharton in his work on Criminal Law, tenth edition, Vol. 2, section 1568, said, 'It is clear that when the law imposes on an individual a ministerial office, then not only is disobedience to the requirements of that law in respect to such office indictable, but an indictment lies for such wilful or negligent misconduct in such office as works injury to the public or to an individual. For mere error of judgment, however, no indictment lies, unless for an act made specifically indictable by statute irrespective of intent.'"

4 Young Men Held In Murder Ring

NEW YORK, March 5.—(INS.)—Four young men, one of whom police said, claimed they had promised to kill a man for $1,000, were held today on charges of suspicion of felonious assault. They were accused of beating Michael Sandella, a cobbler, in his shop, and claimed they had been promised $150 for the attack. Police investigated the possibility the four men were connected with a murder ring.

Not a 'Domestic,' City's Directory Being Fixed

WHEELING, W. Va., March 5.—(AP.)—An error in 8,200 city directories is providing employment for eight persons here. When the new directories were issued, there appeared the word "domestic" after the name of Mrs. Sarah Crow.

Mrs. Crow complained that the error injured her standing in the community. Today eight persons went to work scratching out the word.

MOORE PLEDGE IS CALLED VOID

the first witness for the defense. He testified the estate of Mrs. Moore was insufficient to pay the $50 weekly provided for Mrs. Calvit, and that an agreement was entered into whereby Mrs. Calvit accepted $1,500 and $50 weekly, during her lifetime or until the principal of the estate is exhausted by making up the deficiency of income.

Davis' testimony disclosed Moore had reimbursed the estate of his wife $6,170 for expenditures, including $3,178 for her funeral expenses and $1,500 for medical attention, which Judge Trimble pointed out were expenses for which Moore was responsible.

Attorney Pollack yesterday declared he could show that certain articles of jewelry in Mrs. Moore's estate, listed for sale by the American Art Galleries in New York were afterward withdrawn by Moore and were not included in the accounting of her estate.

These included, according to Pollock, a diamond ring of 10 to 12 carats worth $12,000 to $15,000, which Moore said he could profitably dispose of to Jesse Livermore, and a pearl necklace which Moore ordered restrung and returned to him.

OMISSIONS CHARGED

Pollack asserted the account of Mrs. Moore's estate included only items of jewelry, paintings and art objects sold, and omitted objects withdrawn by Moore. Judge Trimble declared this charge too serious to be overlooked, and if followed by proof showed the perpetration of fraud by Moore.

A deposition by Charles Z. Allen, of Miami, Fla., read by Pollack, averred Moore in 1918 told Allen: "If my wife don't get my estate, Dot will."

Death of Hill Man Blamed on Fumes

DOCTORS HONOR COLLEAGUE

Dr. W. H. Montgomery, who has completed 50 years of practice in Wilmerding, was given a testimonial dinner by members of the Valley Medical Association at the Trafford Gun Club last night. Dr. I. J. Alexander, president of the Allegheny County Medical Society; Dr. C. C. Mechling and Dr. E. S. Montgomery, of Pittsburgh, were speakers. The honor guest was presented a smoking set by the association.

The committee in charge comprised Drs. W. H. Henderson, of East McKeesport; C. J. Todd, of Trafford; W. H. Hazlett, of East Pittsburgh; F. L. Muth and W. J. Salisbury, both of Wilmerding.

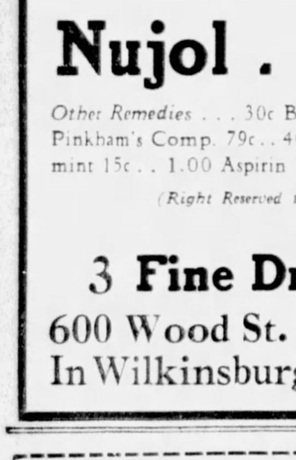
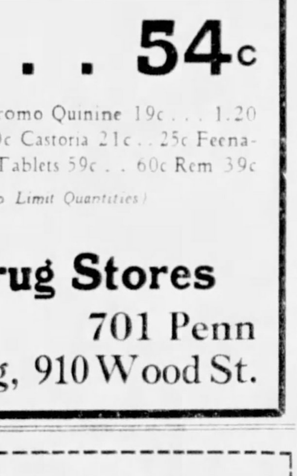
Easiest Way To Break Up a Cold

Millions Say of This Proved Way

Works Fast—Makes You Feel Like a New Person Before You Know It



Take two tablets now.



Better almost before you know it.

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business — don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up, poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

HOW TO GET BONUS LOANS

Veterans can obtain bonus loan application forms, information and assistance in filling out blanks from the Veterans' Bureau Regional Office, 5118 Penn avenue (telephone number, Montrose 7381), but it is suggested that in order to speed work applicants apply to the Sun-Telegraph downtown office, Fifth avenue and Market street; Veterans of Foreign Wars Bureau, 314 Plaza Building; "40-8" Society, 403 McCance Build, Smithfield street and Liberty avenue; the American Red Cross, Chamber of Commerce Building, or neighborhood post headquarters of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion.

Following are steps to be taken by ex-soldiers seeking loans:

1. Go in person or write for a "Veteran's Note," form 1185 of the Veterans' Bureau, from any of the agencies listed above. Mention if a previous loan had been obtained and where.

2. Sign the note and insert the number of your adjusted service certificate and home address in spaces indicated.

3. Have the "Certificate of Identification" on the note executed by a Postmaster, an officer of a veterans' organization or a notary public. This action is unnecessary if there has been a previous loan.

4. Hand or forward by registered mail the note to the Regional Veterans' Bureau office. Mailing is urged as the quickest method. If the application is for the first loan ever sought, note must be accompanied by the bonus certificate as collateral security. If previous loans have been granted, the bureau continues to retain the certificate, and application must be made either to the regional office which granted the previous loan or to the Central Office, Veterans' Bureau in Washington.

5. Needy veterans will receive their checks earlier if more fortunate comrades delay their applications a little.

VETS WARNED OF 'SCHEMERS'

the experience learned following issuance of the first bonus loan.

APPLICATIONS SLUMP

Marked decrease in the number of applicants was reported throughout the city. The bureau reported about 250 ex-soldiers sought applications during the day, the smallest number since Saturday.

Loans mailed to veterans today totaled $306,651.23, with the majority of the 33,000 applications filed at the Veterans' Bureau. Sun-Telegraph and ex-soldier organizations' headquarters yet to be paid.

With the decrease in applications at all post homes and headquarters, the V. F. W. today released their volunteer workers stationed at the Sun-Telegraph main building since the rush was started Monday. Their downtown assistance to ex-soldiers will be handled through the V. F. W. Bureau, 314 Plaza Building. It will be open from 8:30 a. m. to 8 p. m.

The downtown office of the Sun-Telegraph, however, continues as headquarters for the Allegheny County Executive Committee, American Legion, with Service Officer Clyde Hartzell in charge from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. daily. No charge is made for services in assisting applicants fill out application forms, the certificate of identification likewise being given gratis.

More than $30,000,000 worth of certificates at face value were on deposit today at the local bureau as security on loans. The majority of certificates have been on deposit since the first loan with their owners drawing additional money at this time.

600 CHECKS DAILY

While the regional office has reached the speed of mailing 600 checks daily, many intereferences are being caused by ex-soldiers failing to receive information before mailing applications. Many discharge papers, which are not needed, are found in the mail, necessitating the loss of time in returning them to their owners. Likewise, veterans who had obtained loans through a bank and their certificates redeemed by the government must send applications for their new loans to the U. S. Service Bureau, Central Office, Washington, D. C. Receipt of such applications at the local office causes a delay to the veteran in receiving a loan.

VOLUNTEER WORKERS

All veterans seeking loans are urged to apply to veterans organization headquarters or post homes located downtown and throughout the city.

Racketeers Invade Vets' Bonus Field

NEW YORK, March 5.—(INS.)—Authoritives went after a new racket today. They sought to stop the sale of application blanks for soldier bonus loans after it was learned printed or stolen forms were being sold to many victims.

LONDON LAUDS MARION DAVIES

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHIE.
Universal Service.

LONDON, March 5.—Marion Davies, starring in "The Bachelor Father," just released in London, has once again run away with the metropolitan film critics tucked under her arm.

Without a dissenting note the critics find Miss Davies up to and exceeding her reputation as a delineator of the pert, seri-comic type upon which she has built her success.

The London Times, which is most grudging in its praise of American films and American actresses, says:

"Miss Davies endows Tony Flagg, a product of the green-rooms of New York, with just those qualities which were to be expected of her; with a kind of daring frivolity, that is, an impudence that keeps precariously on the right side of impertinence. The film runs successfully up and down in straight lines between Miss Davies at her most sophisticated and Miss Davies at her most sentimental."

G. A. Atkinson, film critic for the Daily Telegraph, states:

"Miss Davies has a shrewd understanding of England and the English; and knows to a hair's breath just how far to go in satirizing our foibles and weaknesses."

Conceding that Marion Davies "has a genius for that kind of thing," Atkinson added "that in any other (actress') hands, the story would probably have degenerated into offensive farce." Offensive, of course, to the Briton.

Says the Empire News:

"In this film Marion is—well, just Marion. She is a likeable girl with a nice sense of comedy; the latter helping her considerably to get over a part which might have been more naughty than nice."

The Sunday Pictorial conceals its compliments in a little pill:

"I note that some of our severer critics complain that Marion Davies imitates Marion Davies. I am glad of that imitation, since there is no one quite so fascinating as Marion Davies to imitate. In 'The Bachelor Father,' she is again happily the same."

GIVES CRAFTON CROSSING PLAN

A. Donnan, counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, yesterday presented the railroad's plan for the reconstruction of a crossing over Steuben street, Crafton, at a hearing before the Public Service Commission here. Commissioner Charles H. Young presided.

The proposed work would cost approximately $75,000, according to Attorney Donnon. His statement will be forwarded to Harrisburg for final approval.

Beetleware is a marvelous discovery—best described by saying it is not glass, not china, not celluloid—but it has all their good points!

Beetleware is a non-fragile composition which makes the most practical and colorful cups, saucers, plates, tumblers, and other table pieces. It is impervious to heat or cold—it does not taste or smell—it resists chipping and breaking—and doesn't lose its color.

HAWES, HERE, RAPS HOOVER COMMITTEES

Senator, in City to Address Club, Says President Should Do Own Thinking

The President of the United States should do some of his thinking for himself and not always resort to committees to do it for him, Senator H. B. Hawes, of Missouri, declared while discussing the Hoover administration on his arrival in Pittsburgh this morning. The Senator will speak on wild life at the annual dinner of the Traffic Club to be held at the William Penn Hotel tonight.

He was accompanied by C. W. Galloway, vice president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad; J. H. Carroll, St. Washington attorney, and his son, J. H. Carroll, Jr., western traffic representative for the railroad.

TO RETURN TO CAPITAL

Senator Hawes will return to Washington tomorrow, where he will join a committee, of which he is vice chairman, on a trip to study wild game in the Georgia Swamps. He has been active in numerous movements to study migratory birds and to improve game shooting.

The senator stated that he did not think that the expenditures to be made as a result of the new soldiers' bonus law would be as large as is generally expected. While some of the former soldiers will immediately put money into circulation a very large share of them will not avail themselves of loans, in his opinion.

TERMINAL PLANS VAGUE

Galloway stated that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is not planning any large expenditures for improvements on any parts of its line at the present time. He declared that plans for a new terminal in Pittsburgh are vague and no definite steps are being taken at present.

The Traffic Club banquet which will be attended by about 1,000 is attracting railroad executives from all parts of the country. Among those who arrived this morning was C. E. Denny, president of the Erie Railroad.

Adrift Twelve Days Fisherman Rescued

PHILADELPHIA, March 5. (AP.) Twelve days after he started out on a little fishing trip, George O. Wilson, 58, of Lake Worth, Fla., again set foot on land today. The motor of his 24-foot fishing boat went dead off the coast of Florida on Washington's Birthday and for nine days he drifted about. Finally he was sighted and rescued by the Harboe Jensen.

DAISY PRESSES FIGHT FOR BAIL

LOS ANGELES, March 5. (AP.) Daisy De Voe, Clara Bow's former secretary recently convicted of grand theft, carried her fight for release from the county jail on bond to the State Supreme Court.

Miss De Voe was convicted of looting the actress' bank account while in her employ and was sentenced to 18 months in the county jail. She asked for a new trial and appealed the denial. Later she appealed the Superior Court's refusal to grant her freedom on bail pending decision on her first appeal.

Pattern 2102

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

We speak of "running-up-a-frock-in-no-time," but seldom see it actually accomplished. Here, however, is a model where you sew up the side seams, set in four godets, and the work is done. No sleeves to worry about as they are just an extension of the blouse. The tiny tucks at the back neck are quickly and easily run, and will make your frock fit so much better. Pattern 2102 makes up beautifully in plain or printed shantung, cotton broadcloth, pique, percale or wash silk.

May be obtained only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 14 requires 3⅜ yards of 39-inch fabric.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred), for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

Cuticura Healed Terrible Itching Burning Scalp. Almost Bald.

"My trouble started with a terrible itching and burning of the scalp. Later it broke out with a lot of little pimples, and when I rubbed and scratched them it caused a great deal of inflammation. I could not sleep and the trouble made me very miserable. My hair fell out so that my scalp was bald in some places.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I purchased more, and after using two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, with the Cuticura Soap, I was healed." (Signed) Mrs. H. C. Smith, 2130 Manton St., Phila., Pa., March 19, 1930.

Over the Hills to Mayview

RAY SPRIGLE

Post-Gazette City Editor—photographed as "Ed Crawford," homeless derelict, who spent a week at Mayview, and is writing his observations for Post-Gazette readers.

Mayview—city hospital and home for the homeless has been much in the public eye of late. Revelations as to favoritism and irregularities in the purchase of supplies for the institution started the present scandal in municipal affairs and the demand for a thorough probe.

Menus were printed—showing that if there were any delicacies bought for Mayview, the rank and file never saw them. The Post-Gazette decided that the Pittsburgh public would be interested in an intimate account of just what transpires behind the gloomy portals of the institution and how 3400 derelicts live.

So Ray Sprigle was sent to Mayview, and got in—not as a newspaper man who might see only what was shown him, but as a homeless and friendless inmate. He will tell you how he got in, what he saw, what is good and what bad about the institution. And he will give you a brief and sympathetic glimpse into the pathetic drabness of the lives of those who have found refuge there.

The first of his articles, under the general heading—"Over the Hills to Mayview" will appear in tomorrow's Post-Gazette. Order a copy now to be sure to follow these disclosures.

Peace Now Until 72nd Congress

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

years man and boy. It teaches us that the lily is a beautiful flower when it is in the enemy's hand.

We like the second verse which is a combination of patriotic chiropractics and defensive harmony. When you smack the foe with a baseball bat don't act as if you were a fairy godmother waving the magic wand.

The "Star Spangled Banner" is an American poem. When you sing it we hope you practice what you screech.

Now we will have that strange interlude known as peace and quiet until the Seventy-second Congress meets to investigate the Seventy-first.

The trouble with our investigations is that the witnesses talk or they don't talk.

In our set talking is known as turning on the phonograph.

It is also known as spilling your lunch. You can walk by any police station now and hear these historic words, "Oh, you won't talk, eh?"

Followed by a couple of thumps that sound like a watermelon being slapped with a bed slat. There will be plenty of ouching and yodeling. But no talking. The sergeant would rather hear 'em sing.

If you get jammed crosswise into a legal cluster the first thing your lawyer says is, "Don't talk."

So when the judge says, "Where were you on the night of Pittsburgh the last bottle on the first Tuesday in the dictionary?"

That doesn't make sense but the judge is trying to trap you into a spelling bee.

He's all right. He's got a diploma that says he can talk. Your lawyer also has front and rear license plates.

So you give the esteemed judge the well known mumbles. Which means growling at an angle through a couple of filled teeth.

The judge yells, "Oh, you won't talk, eh?" And slams you with a gavel borrowed from a higher court.

"Who told you not to talk?" continues the judge without any important interruption. And you cannot say anything about the weather because the answer would tend to degrade and incriminate winter resort advertising.

So your lawyer pops into the legal radius tempered with mercy and he talks. He talks louder than the judge which makes you guilty. No judge is going to stand for being talked louder than.

Your big mistake was in not telling your lawyer to also not talk. And if it could have been made completely co-operative by keeping the judge from talking everything would have been as merry as a weevil in a bale of cotton.

But when you hear that verdict "Guilty" as a bottle under the table" you know that somebody has talked.

It was the jury. And you were not in on the tete-a-tete.

IF STOMACH KICKS UP, BEWARE

"I've suffered my last spell of sour stomach," says H. K. White, of 2619 Washington Boulevard, Chicago. "I found out that by taking ACIDINE three or four times a week I never have that uncertain feeling whether my meals are going to set right or make me miserable from the excessive acid and gas I used to have so regularly.

"Just another of thousands who are astonished at the way this new prescription ACIDINE succeeds when other known remedies fail. The reason is it's different from other medicines. ACIDINE contains Japtase, which in laboratory tests digested 80 times its own weight of certain heavy starchy foods. ACIDINE neutralizes burning acid, soothes irritated stomach and intestinal linings, helps end acidosis. Eat, drink all you want. When sour stomach, gas, pain, heartburn, bad taste, heavy feeling, sluggishness, belching, nervousness, colds, nasal headaches and sleeplessness trouble you, take ACIDINE. Results guaranteed. If not delighted, maker refunds money. Get it from your druggist today.

SUNSHINE MELLOWS Heat Purifies

The advice of your physician is: Keep out of doors, in the open air, breathe deeply; take plenty of exercise in the mellow sunshine, and have a periodic check-up on the health of your body.

LUCKIES are always kind to your throat

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" process includes the use of the Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an extra, secret heating process. Harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos are expelled by "TOASTING." These irritants are sold to others. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

'ROSE PETALS ANDY' ON STAND IN OWN DEFENSE IN RADIO BALM CASE

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, March 5.—James J. Walker is the latest to say "no"—and mean it—to the broadcasters. With wallets bulging, they recently marched into City Hall, donned their most winsome smiles, their most persuasive manner, submitted a tempting offer for a series of talks, were politely but firmly turned down.

Though his Honor is too politically wise to lend his official name to commercialized radio programs, the attempt to lure him to a contract testified to the broadcasters' enterprise. It was worth an effort if only to show that they are alert to the facile and witty character of the Walkerian oratory. And it must have convinced the Mayor anew that he need entertain no worries over his financial future should he decide to abandon politics.

The microphone mahatmas were not so alert in transferring to the parlors of the republic the great human interest story concealed in the passing of the World. The courage and energy displayed by the World staff, knowing that their ship was sinking, the emotional drama that was theirs in struggling to stave off the inevitable, writing their own valedictory, found no voice on the radio waves. More's the pity. The broadcasters muffed a glorious opportunity.

The colleges are still ransacking their attics for old and forgotten marches as a means of telling radio's millions of the charms of dear old Siwash. Colleges today don't need press agents. They don't even need a winning football team. All they need is a zippy marching song and the crooners will do the rest.

Song writers are increasingly hard put to find new titles for the world "love." Strange no song has yet been offered with just that word and no other in its title.

The so-called guest announcer, ridiculed out of the radio picture, is now disguised as master of ceremonies.

In the history of the world was there ever presented such opportunity for first grade vocalists, with the talkies, the stage and radio all beckoning?

The old standby of village band concerts, the "Lustspiel Overture" is seldom heard on the air.

"Limehouse Blues" has never been as fascinating to us since Gertrude Lawrence ceased to sing it.

Not enough attention is paid by the broadcasters—and we are thinking especially of Sigmund Spaeth—to tracking down the classical origins of popular tunes.

It has been a boom year—on the radio at least—for the astrologers.

It seems like a decade since we heard "Singin' in the Rain." There's nothing so dead as last year's song hit.

The cultivation of the spirit of the lowdown, which has developed into such luxuriant growth in America, can be traced chiefly, it is our belief, to the Hoover-Al Smith circus. Since the tents were folded up, the listeners of the nation have cupped their ears to talk on every conceivable subject known to man and H. G. Wells.

And, cupping their ears, they have become wise, not only to themselves, but to their neighbors and to the people beyond the seven seas. The secrets of politicians and pugilists, of cooks and capitalists, of maestros and modistes, are now everybody's gossip. And yet there are people who view with alarm the passing of "the old fireside spirit." The fireside spirit was never more potent.

In their search for deft character impersonators the broadcasters have found no regular schedule for Beatrice Herford. However, they have recently knocked on the doors of Lou Holtz and George Jessel and found them in. Both Holtz and Jessel are among the few who can tell a story well over the microphone.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

HARLEM, N. Y.—Mr. Andrew S. Brown, president of the Fresh Air Taxicab Company, incorporated, takes the witness stand in his own behalf tonight at 7 o'clock when Madame Queen's breach of promise suit is resumed over KDKA.

Mr. Brown was somewhat embarrassed when court adjourned last night after his partner, Amos Jones, had told the jury of Mr. Brown's penchant for making love.

WITH THE DUNK-EYS

The debate on "Dunking" last night was a wow!

There's lots of exceptionally ludicrous talent running loose around NBC that might be pressed into service for a debate like this every week.

McNamee really surprised us the way he mastered his argument in favor of crumbling cornpone into potlikker. We wouldn't be shocked to learn that he was the Cicero of his class.

But "Doc" Rockwell—isn't he a scream? His only serious remark in favor of dunking cornpone in potlikker was that it would dirty tablecloths—perhaps 25,000,000 a day in this country if dunking became nationwide—and thus create employment for the laundries.

Stating that he could come out flat-footed on a pair of fallen arches and win a debate in favor of dunking any time, Doctor Rockwell, Q. Q. Q., regretted that the subject had come to a point where dentists and manicuristss were fighting tooth and nail over it.

He traced dunking back into history and said that it was common practice even in the days of Alexander the Great and Nut Meg the Grater.

Very funny, boys. Here's a vote for more!

* * *

Tom Riggs and Blaine Moke were enjoyable on WCAE with their spontaneous humor. They sounded very much like "Sisters of the Skillet." Tom's imitation of Baby Rose Marie really had us guessing—we thought it was Kay Kronick, the Peabody High School Blues singer. If you like good, clean fun give these boys a closer channel Saturday at 3:15 on WCAE.

QUESTION A DAY:

How old are Ludwig Laurier and Morton Downey?—Eileen D., Millvale.

Answer—Laurier is 52, Downey 29.

Nick Kenny, clever New York columnist, dubs the Jesters (KDKA at 7:15) as "the three rise guys from the yeast." They have received 250,000 letters since January 1.

This is Ben Bernie Night, WABC at 11.

Dorothea James of "Strike Up the Band" fame, sings "My Love for You" and "I'm No Account Any More" in the "Radio Roundup" over WABC at 11:30.

Hear the roar of Niagara Falls depicted over WJAS at 8:45 in those snappy dramatic sketches we've been telling you about.

Lee Morse, WJAS at 9, was reared on a ranch in the Nesbar Indian Reservation . . . . Billy Weixel's Band, having an average age of 19, is to get the once over from Music Corporation of America pretty soon.

With him was C. R. Moore, whose famous radio dog, "Lobo," died some weeks ago. Moore has a new protege, "Lobo the Second," who understands only German commands and is to be heard with Heidt on the air soon.

Mounted Mastodons Lacking in Indiana

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—(INS.)—Although Indiana is the greatest mastodon cemetery in the world in the belief of many scientists, there is not a single assembled and mounted mastodon skeleton in the whole state. Museums and historical societies from all other states have got them all.

This was the lament of Dr. Marcus W. Lyon, Jr., vice-president of the Association of Mammalogists, in an address before the Northern Indiana Historical Society here.

Many Trees Budding Near Ohio Village

XENIA, O.—(INS.)—Despite Mr. Groundhog's prediction of six more weeks of winter, the prevailing spring-like weather has caused many trees in this vicinity to bud. Budding of trees this early is considered extremely rare.

"OH-OH! DERE'S A PAL"

So said Andy last night after Amos criss-crossed the cross-examiner on his questions. Amos' loyalty helped Andy's case a bit!—Tonight's the big night when Andy himself takes the stand in defense of Madame Queen's breach of promise suit. Above autographed photographs were given the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph by "the boys" on their last trip here in October. But a still larger photograph, full of vibrating color and showing Amos 'n' Andy at their best, will appear Sunday in the colorgravure section of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Don't miss it!

HONESTY COSTS THREE LIVES

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., March 5.—(AP.)—The reward for honesty is not always undying fame.

Sometimes it is death, or injury, as it was in the case of John Ayers, 16, but it doesn't keep folks from being honest and punctual in paying their rightful debts.

John was out driving his automobile. He stopped at a filling station to buy a valve core for five cents, but found that he had but three cents in his jeans. The station attendant trusted him for the nickel. John said he would be back. Then he drove to the home of a friend to borrow a nickel. He got it.

On the way back to the station it was necessary to cross some railroad tracks. A fast train struck the car.

John was injured.

Three of his companions, Truman Thompson, 15; William Adkins, 15, and Ruth Hopkins, 16, daughter of the Rev. D. C. Hopkins, district superintendent of the Baptist convention, were killed.

Fumes Kill Father Trying to Save Son

PUEBLO, Col., March 5.—(AP.)—C. V. Hines, 45, garage proprietor, died in attempting to rescue his son, Frank, 22, who was overcome by fumes while repairing a leak in a gasoline storage tank here last night. Hines found his son unconscious in the garage basement. The father succumbed before he could carry him outside. They were dragged out by employes. Physicians said there was little hope for recovery of the youth.

5 Poisoned, 1 Dead After Eating Mush

ANAHEIM, Cal., March 5.—(AP.)—A child was dead and four persons were suffering paralysis today as a result of eating mush which, county authorities said, was prepared from poisoned wheat.

William J. Furber, 16 months old, died. Mr. and Mrs. John S. Kelsay and their two sons—John W., 20, and James, 18—were partly paralyzed. Physicians said they would live. The Furber child was being cared for by Mrs. Kelsay.

RESERVE ANNEX WANTS COUNCIL APPROVAL

Tentative Agreement Made At Committee Hearing; Kambach Would Delay

Annexation of more than 296 acres of Reserve Township to the city was today contingent on approval of Council at its regular meeting next week.

Approval of the annexation was made tentatively yesterday at a public hearing before a councilmanic committee in the City-County Building.

Nearly 150 residents of the section attended. Several talked of their plans for annexation.

The hearing was a continuation of an original hearing started two weeks ago. At that time a mixup developed by which opponents to the annexation were alleged to have had signatories of an original annexation petition affix their signatures to a protesting petition on the grounds that it was merely an addition to the first one sent Council.

Witness favoring the change told Council yesterday they had been approached by residents and told if they agreed to join Pittsburgh their taxes would go up from 27 to 64 mills.

T. D. Lecky, Twenty-sixth Ward chairman, led the fight for annexation.

Councilman George Kambach voted against immediate action on the annexation when the roll was called, on grounds that it should be given more consideration by members. President John S. Herron told Kambach immediate action was necessary to carry the annexation through because of a bill now being acted upon by the Legislature.

Catarrh Causes Head Noises and Deafness

Great European Remedy Opens Up Clogged Nostrils and Relieves Catarrhal Deafness

Few people realize what a serious disease catarrh really is. If neglected, the damage it does is often irreparable. Deafness, lung troubles and head noises that drive the sufferer nearly frantic are frequently due to this insidious disease whilst neglect of catarrh often makes its victim into a wreck of run-down catarrhal wreck. What is catarrh today may soon be something far more serious. It is more than a trifling ailment—more than a disgusting disease. It's a dangerous one. Unchecked, it frequently destroys smell, taste and hearing, and slowly but surely undermines the general health.

If you have catarrh go to all Mayr Liggett's drug stores of your druggist and get an ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little ordinary sugar. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

Catarrh being a disease of the blood, the only possible way to relieve it is by treating the blood itself. Drive the catarrhal poisons from the system by treating the blood, and the disease itself must vanish. Parmint has proved successful in so many cases because it acts directly upon the blood and mucus membrane.

To be able to breathe freely, to hear plainly, smell, taste and arise in the morning refreshed and strong, and with the head and throat free from phlegm are conditions that make life worth living. For your own sake give Parmint a trial—and with your whole system crying for relief you should start the treatment now.

Dr. M. R. Goldman is now a very dignified physician but there is a skeleton in the old cupboard which, without his knowledge or permission, we dare to reveal. Years ago, when he was all of 7 years old, the young man felt, like a million other 7-year-olds, that he was being mistreated at home. He ran away. He ran as far away as the old Yoder Hotel in Soho, with a second runaway, an adult of 9 years. For three days and nights the two stayed at the hotel. Finally the future doctor decided to honor his home with a permanent visit.

Just a few days ago an emergency call came to his office. He was asked to hurry to the Keystone Hotel, formerly the Yoder. He hurried there, treated the patient and then looked up his old runaway room. It looked the same.

ASPINWALL HOSPITAL PLANS CUT

Building Program Halved by Fund Slash; More Room Badly Needed for Vets

The $850,000 building program of the Veteran's Hospital at Aspinwall will be cut in half because of $450,000 appropriation of Congress, according to Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, medical officer in charge of the hospital. The bill sponsored by Congressman J. Howard Swick, of Beaver Falls, called for an $850,000 appropriation.

Dr. Brown said:

DISAPPOINTMENT KEEN

"We are terribly disapointed. With the $850,000 we had planned to enlarge our infirmary wards to take care of 500 patients and to make this a general hospital. We can care for only 225 now and have a large waiting list. We had also planned to enlarge our quarters for attendants, doctors, nurses and help, and to build a new administration building."

The reduced appropriation will necessitate a reorganization of these plans. Work probably will start in the spring. The recent completion of a new $240,000 kitchen and mess hall will make room for 43 more patients in the main biulding, but administrative and housing quarters are still inadequate.

Dr. Brown commenting on an editorial assertion of the Pittsburgh Medical Bulletin to the affect that "veterans are treated without cost at government hospitals for civil life impairments, and maintenance of the already too numerous veterans' hospitals," said:

MAKES STATEMENT

"It is true there are perhaps too many veterans' hospitals, but not in the right places. Pennsylvania sent out the second largest consignment of troops. There are only two veterans' hospitals in this state: at Aspinwall and at Coatsville, near Philadelphia. While it is true that many soldiers require only short surgical relief the peak of veteran's requirement for medical attention will not be reached until 1945. I believe that veterans' hospitals are better able to care for ex-soldiers than are general hospitals because we specialize in their

Blows of U. S. Troops Turned Tide of War, Says Gen. Pershing

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER LIII.

The Germans had a preponderance of 323,000 rifles March 21, 1918, and although this number had decreased, they still had a superiority of about 200,000 May 27. July 15 this was changed, and the Allies then had the superiority by the same number. In other words, the Germans were relatively worse off by 523,000 rifles in July than in March.

This was accounted for almost entirely by the great increase in the numbers of Americans. The French had not been able to add to their strength, but on the contrary they were being reduced faster than the Germans.

One thing pertinent to this situation was that the American reenforcements, despite their backwardness in training, were better soldiers because of their youth, their vigor and their enthusiasm, and they were not at all war-weary.

Gen. Pershing

The Allies now had the necessary advantage in numbers that they had been waiting for, and the time had come to make full use of the Americans, some divisions to enter the battle and others to relieve Allied units from quiet sectors so that they could go to active fronts.

The German offensive south of Rheims, July 15-16, having been checked, the moment was favorable for an Allied counter-offensive.

The selection by the Germans of the Champagne sector and the eastern and southern faces of the Marne pocket on which to make their offensive was fortunate for the Allies, as it favored the counter-attack already planned.

We shall now see the reason for the concentration of several American divisions southwest of Soissons. Some of them were available for use in the main counter-stroke, to be delivered by the French Tenth Army under Mangin. The American 1st and 2d Divisions were hastily assembled to form the American Third Corps under Gen. Bullard.

Ordered to Front

But his corps staff had not yet been fully organized and these divisions, by his direction, under discretionary authority given by me, became a part of the French Twentieth Corps, commanded by Gen. Berdoulat.

This corps then was composed of these two divisions and the French 1st Moroccan Division, which had a fine reputation, and was assigned to the most important position in the attack on the left center of the 10th Army.

The three divisions mentioned had the honor of being the spearhead of the thrust against the vulnerable flank of the salient. The line of advance ran eastward over the commanding plateau just south of Soissons, and across the main road leading from that place to Chateau Thierry.

The 1st had recently been relieved from the Cantigny sector and was en route to a rest area. It was scattered throughout the Dammartin area, just north of Meaux, when it received orders July 13 to move by truck to the front.

After a hurried departure, the advance troops arrived at dawn the 16th at the Forest of Retz (or Forest of Villers Cotterets) and during the night the division moved to the front of the forest. The night of July 17 it went forward over muddy and congested roads, the columns of infantry working their way to the front, where they arrived in the nick of time.

The 2nd Division was at Montreuil-aux-Lions in reserve of the

OAKMONT PLANS PROTEST MEET

A protest meeting will be held in Oakmont Borough Council chambers tomorrow night when plans will be formulated for presentation of the borough's grievances against the Suburban Water Company and the Public Service Commission. The alleged wrongs will be placed before the House investigation committee at its hearings for boroughs at Harrisburg, March 11 and 12.

Oakmont is protesting high water rates and also defeat of a citizens' movement to obtain permission from the commission to operate a bus line in competition with railroad and trolley car companies. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Allegheny Valley Improvement Association.

FUGITIVE, TWO OTHERS HELD

Edward Forrester, 23, of Coraopolis, was lodged in County Jail today, eight months after he had escaped from a constable following a hearing on a serious charge before Justice of the Peace Margaret M. Morgan, of Sewickley. The justice gave Forrester a second hearing last night.

Constable Charles Gordon, it was said, was tripped while he had Forrester handcuffed and was taking him to Sewickley lockup July 9, and his prisoner escaped. The handcuffs were hung on the doorknob of Mrs. Morgan's office two weeks later.

Forrester implicated Mrs. Mary Callaghan and James Lupinacci, a barber, both of Ferry street, in freeing him of the handcuffs. Mrs. Callaghan denied she aided Forrester willingly. Both were held under $500 bail on charges of aiding and abetting a prisoner to escape.

ROBERT VALENTINE . . . 'I CAN USE PICK AND SHOVEL, TOO'

Mrd. Valentine, undaunted by the unemployment situation, painting McCoy's Dam with Bald Eagle Ridge in the background near Bellefronte, Pa. Out of work, he turned to brush and oils.

OUT OF WORK, TURNS ARTIST

BELLEFONTE, March 5.—The unemployment situation has brought to light a spare time artist with plenty of spare time and plenty of mountain scenery to paint.

He is Robert Valentine, of West Curtain street.

Setting up his easel at the edge of town overlooking McCoy's Dam with Bald Eagle Ridge in the background, Valentine, with the carefree zest of a vagabond, paints to his heart's content and forgets his lack of lucrative employment.

He says:

"No, I've no hope of selling anything particularly, but painting occupies my time and my mind when I'm not doing anything else.

"I have no regular trade, but I can use the pick and shovel about as well as I can the brush and pallet."

Valentine has three paintings on exhibition at the Corcoran Art Galleries in Washington, D. C. He likes to paint portraits, but says he would just as soon work in the great outdoors of Pennsylvania's mountains—where subjects are as plentiful as the colors on his pallet.

1 Injured as Auto Crashes, Upsets Bus

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 5.—One man was injured and 12 passengers in a bus had narrow escapes when the bus and an automobile collided in Houston, near here, last night. The injured man was Andy Sulkowsky, 34, of Westland, driver of the automobile. He was taken to Canonsburg Hospital, where his condition today wes regarded as serious. Although the bus was upset, none of the passengers were injured.

School Board to Fill Bellevue Vacancy

The six remaining members of the Bellevue Board of Education will name a successor to Mrs. Nellie E. Robertson, resigned, at a meeting to be called by President S. Frank McKee within 30 days as required by law, according to an announcement by Secretary James W. Graham. The new member will serve until the fall election.

Mrs. Robertson, who had two years to serve, quit her post when a majority voted to erect a new senior high school instead of a junior high school she advocated.

Pitt Sorority Loses Charter, Frat Under Quarantine

Troubles of social organizations at the University of Pittsburgh continued to pile up today.

While the university was officially protesting the withdrawal of the Pi Beta Phi sorority charter by the national body, the Omega Delta fraternity was placed under quarantine, for scarlet fever.

Dean of Women Thyrsa W. Amos said the university had not been consulted when the sorority charter was taken from the local chapter. She said:

"The usual custom was not followed in this case. I am at a loss to understand why the charter was withdrawn. It is not true that we have had trouble with the sorority here."

According to the dean, the scholarship percentage average of Pi Beta Phi was C plus, considered fairly good.

Miss Sarah Fulton, an alumnae of the local chapter, made a special trip to national headquarters to learn why the charter had been withdrawn. She said she was told the action had been taken "for good and sufficient reasons" and there would be no further explanation. Miss Fulton said semester reports had been sent in only a day before they received notice of the charter withdrawal, so that these reports could not have been considered.

Miss Louise Copeland, president of the local chapter of Pi Beta Phi, is president of the Council of Presidents, composed of the heads of all Pitt sororities.

The charter was withdrawn in the midst of the "rushing" season, when new girls are asked to join. A party had been planned this week, to which 33 prospects had been invited. The sorority is at 513 Neville street.

Meanwhile seven students of the university are prisoners in the Omega Delta fraternity house, 425 Neville street. They were quarantined this morning for scarlet fever. Frank Monday, of Tionesta, Pa., ill in the house for several days, last night was taken to the Municipal Hospital. In addition to the students, the caretakers, H. P. Might and his wife, are imprisoned.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated olive colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

BUT

FEW ARE CHOSEN

For any coffee to secure a one-time trial in the American home is not difficult; it may require merely a special price, or a sensationally worded advertisement.

But to win a permanent place on the family shopping list is a different matter. Year-round acceptance hinges altogether on satisfying flavor.

It is significant that year after year more people drink Maxwell House than any other fine blend.

Likewise, reflecting popular demand, more grocers stock Maxwell House than any other coffee in the world.

Why not try this rare and mellow coffee tomorrow, and taste for yourself why its flavor has won such leadership!

BANDITS HOLD UP 3 GAS STATIONS WITHIN HOUR, ESCAPE

POLICE SEARCH FOR ARMED GANG FAILS

Girl Clerk Threatened as Thugs Rob Chain Store; Theft Suspect Identified

Police cruising squads today had failed to find trace of the bandit gang which within an hour last night held up three gasoline stations, two in Homewood and the other in Squirrel Hill.

The gang of four invaded the service station of the American Oil Company, at Brushton avenue and Bennett street, and ordered the two attendants, Walter Trudger, of 7140 Kedron street, and Francis Connelly, of 305 Millvale avenue, Turtle Creek, to "stick 'em up." After obtaining $50.86 from a cash register and a safe, the thugs fled in an automobile.

The license number of the car was observed by a neighbor who had been looking out the window of her home at the time. The plates were issued to an Ingram resident and a checkup was being made to determine if the car had been stolen.

Other victims of the gang were F. L. Yost, attendant at the Standard Oil Company station, at 4028 Beechwood boulevard, who was robbed of $20, and W. R. Stitt, employed in the Iron City Gasoline Station, at 6800 Kelly street, from whom the men obtained $50.

Two bandits late yesterday entered the P. H. Butler store at 5601 McCandless avenue, and ordered Amelia Jenta, a clerk, to remain quiet while they looted two cash registers of an unestimated amount of cash. They escaped in an automobile.

Clifton Cassidy, 34, of 613 East Ohio street, was held as a suspicious person by North Side police today following his arrest in connection with the holdup of George Angels, manager of the Fairfax Restaurant, 414 East Ohio street, early today. Angels, police said, identified Cassidy, but the latter denied the charge.

Search was continued today for a robber suspect who escaped barefooted amid a hail of bullets, one of which is believed to have struck him after he eluded Constable Samuel Petoski, of Brackenridge, yesterday. The suspect was trailed by a posse of Allegheny Valley officers to a hillside near Braeburn and to New Kensington where his trail was lost.

Petoski arrested John Metoski, 21, of 47 Pine street, Natrona, while taking clothing to the suspect, known to police as "Jerry," who had been hiding in a house in River avenue, Natrona, according to the officers. Metoski was lodged in the Tarentum police station.

The suspect, police said, was one of three men wanted in connection with a series of store burglaries in Natrona recently.

Arthur Barr, 23, of Cleveland street, Brackenridge, was lodged in the Tarentum lockup by Patrolman Roy Hanna in connection with the holdup of George Gregory, a Brackenridge restaurateur, Sunday, when $30 was taken from a cash register of the restaurant and $14 from Gregory, police said.

ARGUE BUILDING OF APARTMENT

Erection of a $1,800,000 apartment house in Beacon street, Squirrel Hill, was opposed yesterday at a Council hearing on the ground that radios, phonographs, player pianos and "wild parties" of 180 families that the building would house would constitute a nuisance to home owners in the vicinity.

Samuel Gellman, realtor and builder, who plans to erect the apartment, is asking Council for a change from "B" to "A" zone. Opponents to the change were led by A. W. Bell, who pointed out the prospective sources of noise and added:

"I understand there will be a 180-car garage underneath. This may blow up and cause a catastrophe."

Told by Gellman the building was to be fireproof, Bell asserted:

"I've heard of fireproof buildings blowing up or burning up. That building is only on paper. It won't look so nice if it is built."

Carrick Mothers' Club Stages Exhibition Of Rare Books

One of the most interesting meetings the Carrick Mothers' Club has ever had was that of yesterday and it was made so largely by the exhibit of old books which the members had assembled. Mrs. Frank Beech exhibited an old monk's book of 1430, written on parchment, and exceedingly rare. Miss Rachel Lowe showed a family Bible more than 300 years old and an old religious book dating from 1700. Her brother, Arthur Lowe, sent some of his heirlooms and Mrs. Ida Kirk McIlroy brought some of the books which had belonged to her father, the Rev. James Kirk who was one of the first Greek and Latin professors in Western Pennsylvania.

Another book shown contains much of the history of the community, including the first record of the Concord Presbyterian Church which is celebrating its one hundredth anniversary this year, and another one, also the property of Mrs. John M. Phillips, carries the record of the first club formed in the South Hills—the Southern Avenue Literary Association.

A Bible dated 1530, the property of the Ellsworth Trott family, and some old school books owned by Mrs. John Robson were others in the collection. Included also were some finely bound old daguerreotypes.

Mrs. Ray Arthur Hunt gave one of her interesting talks on bookbinding, illustrating it with some beautiful specimens of her own work. Mrs. Velma J. Twitmeyer sang, accompanied by Mrs. Wilda Long, and the hospitality committee served refreshments of its own making.

The club voted to give $25 as a nucleus for a fund to which they hope other clubs will add and which will be used to employ men for cleanup work on some of Pittsburgh's unsightly hillsides.

SUGAR IMPROVES FLAVOR OF MEAT AND VEGETABLES

Try a Dash of Sugar to a Pinch of Salt

Cooks who are successful in the art of making vegetables appetizing depend upon two rules: First, cook raw vegetables in as little water as possible. Canned vegetables should not be recooked—merely heated thoroughly. Second, season with sugar as well as salt.

Salt, by itself, merely overcomes flatness. Sugar, however, brings out the flavor of the vegetable. And when the two are combined an unusually appetizing goodness is developed. A dash of sugar to a pinch of salt is a good rule to follow.

The more one experiments with sugar and salt in seasoning string beans, cabbage, spinach, peas, carrots and other vegetables, the more apparent is the flavor value of this combination. Doctors and dietitians approve this use of sugar as a flavor. Most foods are more delicious with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

DIGNITY AND BEAUTY MARK RADIANCE OF BRIDAL FROCKS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 5. — Tradition is surely woven into the very fabric of the bride's dress. And surely few women would wish to depart from that self-same tradition when planning their frock of frocks. Of course, there are always certain modifications demanded by current fashion, but the essentials of an exquisite wedding dress rarely change. A soft silhouette, long clinging lines, rich, lustrous satin, a foamy cloud of tulle and lace, a train; these are some of the principal specifications of the perfect bridal frock.

DIGNITY, BEAUTY and radiance make the keynote of the frock and so it is a matter for rejoicing that even the most rabid sartorial iconoclast seldom departs radically from tradition when designing or choosing her wedding gown.

* * *

BUT TO RETURN to our bridal dress. This year there has been some slight concession to the mode for off-white and we have seen some exquisite frocks made in pinky-white or pinkish-ivory shades, while other frocks have used a sort of pearl-white that is most effective and yet entirely in keeping with the purpose of the frock, as all of these off-white shades are.

WE HAVE had sketched for you one of the loveliest bride's dresses worn this season. It is by Philippe and Gaston and is of pinkish-ivory satin of heavy, gracefully falling quality. At the front of the bodice the soft draping starts at a point high at the center, forming part of the diagonal yoke which tops the skirt. The three-quarter sleeves have long pointed drapery falling from the elbow. The front and sides of the skirt are circular with the fulness arranged in spaced godets. There is a long, heavy train.

COLDS

make handkerchiefs a menace

Tests show millions of germs survive in handkerchief—to self-infect user time after time.

Kleenex Disposable Tissues

advised by doctors

NOW latest scientific experiments prove that Kleenex, used instead of handkerchiefs, is the safe way to care for colds.

Ordinary handkerchiefs used during colds were tested in laboratories and found to contain as many as 4,170,000 disease germs—over 200,000 when used a single time. This means that when you use handkerchiefs for colds you actually protect these germs in your pocket or handbag—and then carry them back to your face! Self-infection and serious diseases often follow. Kleenex avoids all danger—you use it only once, then discard.

What Kleenex is

Kleenex is a soft, super-absorbent tissue. So inexpensive that you use each tissue only once, then discard. So gentle that irritation is impossible.

You buy Kleenex in Cellophane-sealed packages. Each tissue is as completely sanitary as it looks. Each tissue that touches your face is clean as clean can be.

For beauty

Use Kleenex to remove creams, cosmetics from the face. Its absorbency assures thorough cleansing.

Ask for Kleenex at any drug, dry goods or department store; 25 cents, 50 cents and $1. If you have not tried Kleenex, send for a free trial packet to the Kleenex Company, Lake Michigan Building, Chicago, Illinois.

Bacteriological tests show:

1. That handkerchiefs used by persons having colds may contain as many as 4,170,000 germs per handkerchief. The organisms included are those associated with colds.

2. That organisms associated with colds, when impregnated upon linen and rinsed in boiling water and soap water, were not killed nor appreciably inhibited from growing.

KLEENEX Disposable TISSUES

Why we spend $2,000,000 to put CAMEL cigarettes in the new HUMIDOR PACK

WE have been in the tobacco business a long time down here at Winston-Salem and we take a lot of pride in the quality of the cigarettes we make.

While we have spent a good many million dollars advertising Camels, we've always held to the old fashioned idea that the thing that really counts is what we put into our cigarette and not what we say about it.

If we know anything about tobacco, and we think we do, Camels contain the choicest Turkish and the mellowest, ripest domestic leaves that money can buy.

In fact we have every reason to be proud of the quality of Camels as they come from the factory, but the remark of an old friend of ours from Denver some time ago emphasized a point that has been the problem of the cigarette industry for years.

As he inhaled the smoke from a Camel we gave him in our offices one morning, he sighed with very evident enjoyment and then asked jokingly, "What is this, a special blend reserved for Camel executives?"

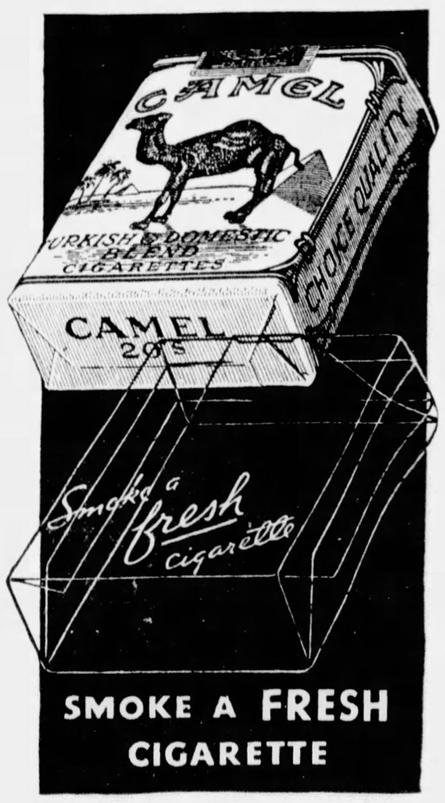
"Certainly not," we told him. "This package of Camels was bought at the corner store this morning."

"Well," he said, "I've been a dyed in the wool Camel smoker for a good many years, but upon my soul I never got a cigarette as good as this in Denver. If you would give the rest of the world the kind of Camels you sell here in Winston-Salem, you ought to have all the cigarette business there is."

THAT statement simply emphasized again the cigarette industry's most important problem. The more we thought about it, the surer we were that he was dead right, and that somehow, something must be done.

Denver wasn't getting a fair break. Neither in fact was any other town. The only people who really knew how good Camels could be, were the folks right here in Winston-Salem.

That was due to a factor no cigarette manufacturer had ever been able to control.



Naturally there is no difference whatever in the quality of the tobacco in Camels, whether you buy them in Winston-Salem, Denver or Timbuctoo. But up to now there has been a very real difference in the condition of the cigarettes by the time they reached the smoker.

The flavor and mildness of fine tobacco depend upon the retention of its natural, not added, moisture content which is prime at about ten per cent.

In spite of our great pains always to make sure Camels left the factory with just the right amount of natural moisture, no cigarette package had ever yet been designed that could prevent that precious moisture from drying out.

THERE are three things about a cigarette that can sting the tongue and unkindly burn the throat.

(1) Cheap tobaccos.
(2) Particles of peppery dust left in the tobacco because of inefficient cleaning methods.
(3) A parched dry condition of the tobacco due to loss of natural moisture by overheating or evaporation.

Always certain of the quality of our tobaccos we had already made Camel a "dustless" cigarette by the use of a specially designed vacuum cleaning apparatus exclusive with our factory.

Now, if we could perfect a package that would actually act as a humidor and retain the natural moisture content, then Yuma, Arizona, could enjoy Camels as much as we do here at Winston-Salem.

We knew what we wanted. We tried many things. We asked the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory to help us.

After many experiments and humidity tests covering all methods of packing cigarettes came the detailed report of which this is the net:

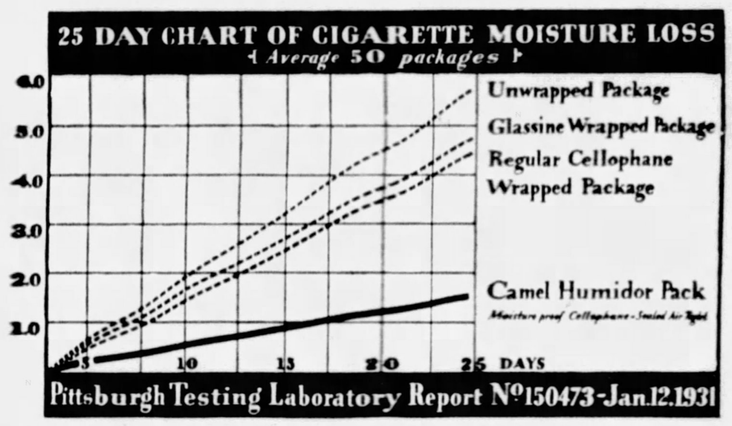
(A) No existing cigarette package, including those wrapped in glassine paper or ordinary cellophane, gives anything like adequate protection against evaporation.

(B) All cigarettes so packed tend to dry out rapidly from the day they are released from the factory.

(C) Only a waterproof material with a specially devised air-tight seal could give the desired protection.

(D) This measure, while costly, could be relied on to keep Camels in prime condition for at least three months in any climate.

If you have a technical bent, the graph below made by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory will show you the exact results of their exhaustive study.



Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory chart above graphically shows you that only the Camel Humidor Pack delivers cigarettes to you in prime condition

YOU may be sure we gave this report a lot of careful study. We checked it and re-checked it and then we went ahead. We tried this device and that. At last we met success. The air-tight wrapping involved the designing of special processes, special machines.

That costs a lot of money, more than $2,000,000 the first year, but after you have tried Camels packed this modern new way we are sure you will agree it is a fine investment.

For some time now every Camel that has left our factory has gone out in this new Humidor Pack.

We have said nothing about it until now, to make sure your dealer would be able to supply you when the good news came out.

Camel smokers of course have already discovered that their favorite cigarette is better and milder now than ever before.

If you aren't a Camel smoker, try them just to see what a difference there really is between harsh, dried out tobacco and a properly conditioned cigarette.

You can feel the difference, you can hear the difference and you certainly can taste the difference.

Of course we're prejudiced.

We always have believed that Camel is the world's best cigarette.

Now we know it.

Just treat yourself to Camels in the new Humidor Pack and see if you don't agree.

REFLECTIONS ABOUT EUROPEAN DRAMATIST AND PLAYS THAT ARE TO COME

Schnitzler Play Coming Revives Memories Of Vienna Visit

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Since Arthur Schnitzler is to be the next European dramatist introduced to Pittsburgh audiences by the Theater Guild, "The Lonely Way" being the promised play, it will be well to remember that Schnitzler is the most famous of Austrian dramatists. Molnar, you know, is Hungarian.

George Seibel

Austrian dramatists write in German, of course, but are usually in a class by themselves. That goes back as far as Grillparzer, greatest of them all, who stirred Byron's admiration. "Grillparzer is a hard name to pronounce," said Byron, "but the world will have to learn it."

The world hasn't learned it very well. Almost the only time Grillparzer threatened to become famous in America was when the New York police tried to stop a German performance of his "Sappho," under the impression that it was Daudet's "Sapho" adapted by Clyde Fitch for Olga Nethersole.

Schnitzler is far better known than Grillparzer ever will be. His "Anatol" has been played everywhere. Cycles of his plays have been given in Paris. He is the Frenchiest of German authors. And he is a psychologist who is also a humorist, a rare combination.

VISIT TO SCHNITZLER

When I was in Vienna about three years ago I paid a visit to Arthur Schnitzler. My stay was to be short, and a friend had promised to arrange two things for me—an inspection of the royal Burgtheater and an evening with Schnitzler.

Schnitzler called me up shortly after my arrival. He spoke very good English. When I complimented him upon that fact the next day in his home, he insisted that his English was merely good enough for telephone use.

My friend, a young Viennese dramatist, accompanied me to the home of the great man next evening. We took a cab to the Sternwartenstrasse; we should have taken a gondola for it was raining like a cloudburst.

Schnitzler's study was on the second floor back, overlooking a beautiful garden. He is an affable, quiet, bearded man of about. He looks very Parisian like his plays. A coiled serpent in bronze was the most conspicuous object upon his desk.

We talked of everything under the sun and moon. Even of Schnitzler's own work. That is the thing he dislikes to talk about. A large section of his bookcases is covered by silken curtains. Behind these curtains are his own books, all editions and translations, extra many languages even Japanese.

WHICH IS HIS BEST?

Schnitzler was happy when I told him I regarded his Professor Bernhardi as the finest dramatic plea for tolerance since Lessing's Nathan, the Wise.

As I was leaving, he said he wished to autograph one of his books for me—which did I consider best?

"I possess those I consider best," I told him. "Suppose you give me the one you consider worst."

"That one I am always writing," he replied.

Then he autographed two of his more recent publications.

"Therese," a novel, had just been published. But Schnitzler was more interested in the novel of another writer that had just appeared.

"Read 'The Case of Sergeant Grischa,'" he told me. "It is by Arnold Zweig. It is the greatest novel of the decade."

I brought the first copy to Pittsburgh almost a year before it became a best seller in America.

When I see "The Lonely Way" in the Theater Guild season I shall think of the quiet house in the Sternwartenstrasse of Vienna and the quiet man who is known in every capital of Europe.

'STRANGE INTERLUDE' TO RETURN TO NIXON

The Nixon will be dark next week. The next attraction in that house will be Eugene O'Neill's nine-act drama, "Strange Interlude," the entire week of March 23 instead of March 19, 20 and 21, as first announced. There will be no matinees, as each performance starts promptly at 5:30 p. m. At 7:40 p. m. there is a dinner intermission until 9 p. m. The final curtain descends at 11 p. m. This play is not part of the Theater Guild subscription series.

The Guild's fifth subscription play of the season will be "Green Grow the Lilacs." It is a drama of the vanished American border. It opens Monday night, March 30.

Movie Studios Are Planning Pictures With Special Juvenile Appeal

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 5.

Aroused to the need of winning the children back to the movies, all the studios are planning pictures with special appeal to youngsters.

After letting Leon Janney go a few months back, Warner Brothers have signed him to a new long-term contract, and will feature him in Booth Tarkington's story, "Penrod and Sam."

Mr. Cody.

The talkie will be made by First National co-producing unit with Warners, under the direction of Robert Milton. Production starts as soon as the story is adapted.

In the meanwhile, young Janney is on a personal appearance tour in the Warner theaters. A clause in his contract provides, however, he can be drafted back to the studio on two weeks' notice.

Janney is the child actor who appeared in "Courage" and "Father's Son."

Lew Cody, who is a great fight fan, tells about two willing maulers who put on a furious flurry until one took a sock on the chin

CHAT ABOUT STAGE AND SCREEN

NOTES ABOUT COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR STAGE, SCREEN

The 1931 edition of "The Student Prince" comes to the Shubert Alvin next week with a cast featuring George Hassell, William Pringle, Gertrude Lang, Edward Nell, Jr., Mario Weeks, Hollis Davenny, Marie Stoddard, Adolph Link and Margaret Wells. Seats are now on sale.

More than ordinary interest attaches the announcement that George Sharp will present "Death Takes a Holiday" in the Pitt next week. With Philip Merivale in the leading role, it was seen in the Alvin about a month ago.

Antoinette Perry, co-director with Brock Pemberton, of "Strictly Dishonorable," which is playing a return engagement in the Nixon this week, is the mother of Margaret Perry, Broadway "find" of last season, and is the first stage director the New York Social Register has given to the theater.

FILMS OPEN TODAY

There will be an advance midnight showing of Charlie Chaplin's "City Lights" in the Aldine tonight at 11:30. Popular prices for the performance will prevail, admission being 50 cents. A group of Loew Theater executives will attend the opening performance here and invitations have been extended to Gov. Pinchot, Mayor Kline and other city, county and state officials. The regular engagement of "City Lights" begins tomorrow.

The Pennsylvania Board of Censors has at last released the Paramount talking drama, "Stolen Heaven," starring Nancy Carroll and Phillips Holmes, and the picture will open in the Fulton and Sheridan Square Theaters today. "Stolen Heaven" was written by Dana Burnet, author of Miss Carroll's "Shopworn Angel."

This is the final week of the showing in the Warner of "Cimaron." Edna Ferber's story of the building up of the middle western frontiers. Richard Dix, Irene Dunne, Edna May Oliver and Estelle Taylor have the lead roles.

SHOWS OPEN TOMORROW

"East Lynne," with Ann Harding, Clive Brook, Conrad Nagel, Beryl Mercer and Cissie Loftus, comes to the Stanley screen tomorrow. As a novel and stage play it has been popular for a half century.

The last word in modernistic interiors was provided, it is said, for the lavish sets of "The Easiest Way," the new Constance Bennett feature opening tomorrow in the Penn. Robert Montgomery and Adolphe Menjou portray the leading male roles.

"Body and Soul," co-starring Charles Farrell and Elissa Landi, opens on the Enright screen tomorrow. Brian McDonald will present "Hulla-Buloo," with Gracie Barrie, blues singer, on the stage.

OTHER ATTRACTIONS

Gus Edwards' Proteges will head the vaudeville bill coming to the Davis starting Saturday. The screen offering will be "Body and Soul," with Charles Farrell and Elissa Landi featured.

"Seas Beneath," with George O'Brien, Marion Lessing, Walter Kelly, Warren Hymer and William Collier, Sr., opens on the Harris screen Saturday.

They play truck-drivers . . . Myron Selznick, aggressor in several Hollywood fist-fights, went to it again in the film stars' exclusive Embassy Club. On the Stage

Leon Janney, young hero in "Father's Son," picture recently seen in the Stanley, is coming to that theater in person tomorrow as a feature of the new stage show.

EARTHQUAKE SHOWN IN METROTONE NEWS

The first pictures of the earthquake disaster in New Zealand are contained in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. They are considered the most remarkable sound motion pictures ever shown of the horrors attending an earthquake. In this disaster, six towns and cities were practically wiped out, 600 persons killed, more than 1,000 fatally injured, and tens of thousands made homeless.

One of the most remarkable scenes in this picture is taken from an airplane and shows the ruins of the once populous city of Napier. In all the vast panorama, not a single building remains. Other scenes show the thousands of refugees being fed.

'Up Pops the Devil' Soon to Be Filmed

Albert Hackett, co-author with Frances Goodrich, of the stage comedy, "Up Pops the Devil," which has been one of the Broadway shows of the current season, has arrived in Hollywood to assist in the preparation of the script, which will be made into a talking picture at West Coast studios. Hackett acted in the stage version, but is not scheduled to play in the screen production. In the cast of this are Norman Foster, Carole Lombard, Skeets Gallagher, Stuart Erwin and Wynne Gibson. Edward Sutherland will direct.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Discussion was about typographical errors, those amusing fox paws of the compositor that always stick out like the horns of a dilemma and quite often are the "hit" of the issue of the paper in which they appear. Joe Flynn, ahead of "The Student Prince" (In the Alvin next week—Adt.), was telling one, however, that was not "on" the compositor. It was on a Broadway electric sign advertising a current melodrama. Through some quirk on the part of the control gadget one letter was not lighted. The result was startling. See Joe for the secret.

Then John L. Peltret, herald for "Lysistrata," the Gilbert Seldes treatment of the Aristophanes comedy (In the Alvin March 16—Advt. again), produced a "proof" of an advertisement in which the compositor's deft work got by the eagle-eyed proofreader, who gloats every time he makes those funny little marks of emendation on a printer's ouvrage d'art. The printer made it "Lysi Strata" by Aristo Phanes. He believed everybody should have at least two names in these days of plenty.

Many of the "comedy" gags of the stage have the effect of one on the audience.

An idea—just to put you wise to what some chattering picture house may be offering you here ere long. Bill Robinson and "Brown Buddies" recently moved into a Harlem theater that is regularly devoted to the movies. So "Brown Buddies" was cut in two for a stage "presentation." One-half is presented the first part of the week and the second part is staged the last half. Sounds like a popular old drink.

The easiest way to money is the inheritance route; the toughest, the matrimonial road, while the most uncertain is the play production method. Or is their any method in that?

Three talking picture scenes will be part of "Miracle at Verdun," Theater Guild production, which will have its premiere in New York March 16. This will be the first time sound pictures will have been used as part of a dramatic stage production.

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING,

U.S. TROOPS LED GREAT ALLIED ATTACK

1st Corps, recuperating, when the order came on the 14th to move by truck toward the front. Dawn July 17 found the infantry and machine gun elements arriving at the Forest of Villers-Cotterets.

Roads Jammed

The night of the 17th the movement toward the front, through the forest, was made with extreme difficulty. The narrow roads became jammed, troops lost their direction and there was serious doubt whether they would be at their line of departure at the appointed hour of 4:35 a. m. the 18th.

With most commendable energy and initiative the officers led their commands forward during the night, winding in and out through the almost inextricable snarls of wheeled vehicles. One of the battalions assigned to lead in the attack, though on the march most of the night, was forced to move on the run for the last few hundred yards, and just reached its place as the barrage started.

(One unnecessary cause of delay reported was that the French officer in charge of the truck trains insisted upon counting the number of men carried and obtaining receipts for their transportation. Harbord: "Leaves From a War Diary," p. 321.)

The 2d Division headquarters found itself July 16 with no knowledge of the terrain and little obtainable from any source. Harbord and his Chief of Staff, Col. Preston Brown, started for the front and accidentally ran into the headquarters of the 20th Corps. They there found the directive for the attack, from which they issued the divisions orders.

Col. Brown

The country over which the 20th Corps attacked consisted of a succession of wooded ravines that lay across the line of advance, with scarcely any roads leading toward the front. The enemy's main defenses along the ridges of the Soissons plateau were naturally strong, and with the added entrenchments the enemy evidently felt himself reasonably secure.

Advance Is Costly

It was harvest time and the ripening wheat that covered the rolling landscape gave excellent cover for the enemy's infantry and machine guns, but it also helped to hide our advance.

Without the usual preliminary artillery preparation, the assaulting battalions, accompanied by light tanks, plunged forward behind the barrage. The enemy was caught by surprise and the 1st and 2d Divisions, gallantly supported by the Moroccan Division in the center, soon overran his forward positions and broke through the zone of his light artillery.

Though constantly confronted by fresh enemy troops, this corps took the lead in the advance and its progress was most satisfactory. By noon it had captured half of the great plateau in its front, with many prisoners, and a little later forward elements reached the day's objective.

The 2d Division encountered strong opposition at Vierzy. In a determined effort launched after 6 p. m. the town was captured and a line overlooking the valley of the Crise was occupied. The 1st Division had carried everything before it, capturing defended farm houses and other points where it met stiff resistance, finally taking Missy-aux-Bois and holding a front line slightly beyond that town. The line ran diagonally across the Paris-Soissons road.

The attack of the corps was resumed the morning of July 19, but during the night the German lines directly in front of Soissons had been heavily reinforced with machine guns and artillery.

Stubborn Resistance

In their advance the French 153d Division and the 1st Division met with much resistance, the 2d Brigade of the 1st encountering fire of the enemy both from the front and the left flank. Tanks were sent to its assistance and with close artillery support the division was enabled slowly to gain ground, but at considerable cost.

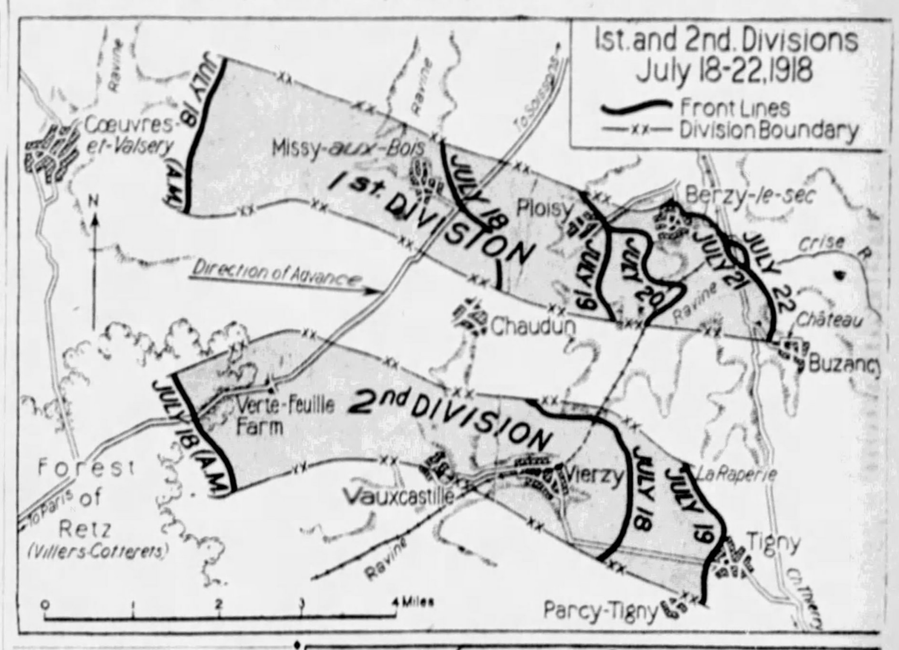
The 2d Division, with the reserves of the first day in the lead, forged ahead to the Soissons-Chateau Thierry road, but was compelled to withdraw to the vicinity of La Raperie. It finally established a line just west of Tigny, with the road under its guns.

The division was relieved by the French 58th Division the night of the 19th, having advanced six and one-half miles, captured 3,000 prisoners and 75 guns, and sustained about 5,000 casualties.

July 20 the 1st Division continued its advance doggedly against a desperate stand by the Germans on the knoll in front of Berzy-le-Sec. The French had been ordered to take Berzy-le-Sec, but failed. In the afternoon Summerall directed that it be assaulted by his 2d Brigade, but the attempt did not succeed that day. Assisted by the skillful use of artillery and with consummate dash, under Brig. Gen. B. B. Buck, in the face of intense artillery and machine gun fire, the 2d Brigade captured the town on the twenty-first. Meanwhile, the 1st Brigade and the French 67th Division, which had relieved the Moroccans, had crossed the Soissons-Chateau Thierry highway and reached the Chateau of Buzancy. The line now ran parallel to the Crise, with Soissons commanded by our artillery.

Gen. Buck

The 1st Division, throughout four days of constant fighting, had advanced nearly seven miles, taken 3,500 prisoners and 68 guns from seven different German divisions employed against it, and had about 7,200 casualties.



A Decisive Blow

The thrust of the 20th Corps was conducted with such magnificent dash and power that the enemy's position within the salient was rendered untenable. The dangerous character of the threat caused the Crown Prince to begin a general withdrawal from the Marne. This operation snatched the initiative from the enemy almost in an instant and from that moment he was on the defensive.

Gen. Mangin, who commanded the French 10th Army, issued the following general order:

"Officers, non-commissioned officers and soldiers of the 3d United States Army Corps, shoulder to shoulder with your French comrades you were thrown into the counter-offensive battle which commenced July 18.

"You rushed into the fight as to a fete.

"Your magnificent courage completely routed a surprised enemy and your indomitable tenacity checked the counter-attacks of his fresh divisions.

"You have shown yourselves worthy sons of your great country and you were admired by your brothers-in-arms.

"Ninety-one guns, 7,200 prisoners, immense booty, 10 kilometers of country reconquered. This is your portion of the spoil of victory.

"Furthermore, you have really felt your superiority over the barbarous enemy of the whole human race against whom the children of Liberty are striving.

"To attack him is to vanquish him.

"American Comrades: I am grateful to you for the blood so generously spilled on the soil of my country.

"I am proud to have commanded you during such days and to have fought with you for the deliverance of the world."

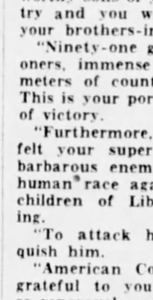
Our 1st and 2nd Divisions, with the Moroccan division between them, had struck the decisive blow that turned the tide of the war. Petain said it could not have been done without our divisions.

Enemy Realizes Loss

On the other side, the German Chancellor, Von Hertling, said later:

"We expected grave events in Paris for the end of July. That was on the fifteenth. On the eighteenth even the most optimistic among us understood that all was lost. The history of the world was played out in three days."

The following quotation from a special report by Col. (later brigadier general) Paul B. Malone, who had been assigned to line duty and commanded the 23d Infantry of the 2nd Division in this fight, gives an excellent and vivid picture of the difficulties under which our troops deployed for the advance:



Gen. Malone

"The road to the front was found completely blocked, the troops endeavoring to thread their way through and between vehicles of all kinds. It began raining early in the evening and the night became so dark that it was impossible to see at more than a pace distance.

"No opportunity of any kind could be given to the company or platoon commander to reconnoiter the way to the front, through an intricate network of roads and trails in the forest.

 * * Proceeding to the post of command of the French regimental commander, I stationed non-commissioned officers to guide the troops as best they could in the proper direction.

Soldiers Lose Way

"The attack was to start at 4:35 a. m. At about 10 minutes to 4, the sergeant major of the 1st Battalion arrived at my P. C. (post of command) with the information that Companies A and B had lost their way and that he thought only a small portion of the 1st Battalion had reached the position for the attack.

"A moment later I was advised that two battalions of the Marines were then passing the P. C. en route to the front, from which it was apparent that they could not possibly reach the jumping off trenches in time.

"I immediately left the P. C. with my entire staff, the French regimental commander, all of his runners and all of mine. The French regimental commander turned over all of his runners to the Marines, and Lieutenant Colonel Phelan placed them with his troops to guide them as rapidly as possible to the front.

"I personally moved to the front with Companies A and B, picking up along the way some troops of the 9th Infantry and of the 23rd Infantry that had been lost in the darkness.

"It seemed futile to hope that any attack under such circumstances could be a success.

"Nevertheless, the troops were led as rapidly as possible along the road through the woods, and at 4:35 a. m. our artillery barrage came down with a crash. A guide led me for a few minutes in the wrong direction, but the proper direction was finally recovered and at 5 a. m. myself and this detachment, with my staff officers and runners, emerged from the eastern extremity of the Forest de Retz at the proper point prescribed in the orders for the attack.

"The attack was already under way, the Second Battalion leading the attack had gone over the top at H hour (4:35 a. m.), but to reach its position it had been necessary to advance during the first 15 minutes at a run, the men reaching the jumping off trenches breathless and exhausted . . .

"From the time the troops left the vicinity of Montreuil-aux-Lions (near Chateau Thierry) they had received no food and practically no water. They had had no sleep and had fought continuously since the beginning of the operation . . . no more difficult circumstances could have confronted a command than that which presented itself to this regiment on the night of July 17-18.

Describes Difficulties

"Without reconnaissance of any kind it was compelled to move through an absolutely unknown terrain during a night which was intensely dark and raining, to thread its way through a road blocked to a standstill with traffic of all kinds, find its jumping off place of which nothing was previously known, form in three echelons for an attack, all three of which must move in harmony under an artillery barrage, the exact timing of which could not be secured because of the unknown incidents of the attack, and attack over a terrain which it had not previously seen, the attack changing in direction twice during its progress.

"The troops actually ran to their destination and met the enemy in an entrenched position with no other weapon than the rifle; yet they were completely and overwhelmingly successful.

"With a personnel reduced in strength from 3,400 to 1,479 and the officers from 99 to 37 by casualties in action, the regiment carried its attack over a distance of eight kilometers capturing in so doing approximately 2,100 enemy soldiers and 75 officers, ammunition and stores."

Should a Working Girl Be Kept Busy at Home?

Has a working girl any "rights" in her home?

Must Betty Sue spend her evenings scrubbing and cleaning for Mamma when she's dog-tired from eight hours behind the stocking counter in the big store? Must she spend her Sundays that way, too?

Mamma insists she must because there's so much work for her to do in their three-room flat more than a lick and a promise. No, Mamma is not crippled or ailing or ill. She's a husky, healthy lady of 40 summers but having raised a girl child, she apparently feels that it's time for her to sit back and be taken care of. So Betty Sue is keeping her nose to the grindstone, washing 'em out and shining 'em up . . . and she's getting pretty tired of it.

And Betty Sue isn't the only one. Scores of other overpeeved young 'uns will echo her wail . . .

Tired After Day's Work

Because scores of other Mammas who've never spent a day in the business world seem to figure that work in an office or a store or a factory isn't work . . .

They wouldn't think of expecting their husbands to fuss around the house . . . of their sons. But a Girl? That's different.

Is that story happening in your home?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I hope you won't think that my problem is silly, because it has me just terribly bothered and I don't know what to do about it. I hope you will help me by publishing it in the paper and giving me some advice. I want my mother to see it. She reads your paper and maybe she'll see what I'm up against and not expect so terribly much of me.

"I am 18 years old and work behind the stocking counter in a big store all day. You know you don't get much chance to sit down on a job like that, so I'm tired when I get home. But my mother seems to think I just do nothing all day, and she expects me to do the scrubbing and cleaning of evenings when I get home from work. Do you think that's right? There are other girls that I know whose mothers expect the same of them. They work in offices but, Sally, after any girl works eight hours downtown should she be expected to come home and do the housework?

Mother Perfectly Well

"No matter what kind of work you do, you get tired. I have tried to tell my mother that, but she can't seem to see it. She says that it's too much work for her to take care of our flat, although we have only three rooms. She runs the vacuum cleaner over the rugs but, when I come home in the evening, she expects me to run to the store for the groceries and to do all the scrubbing and other cleaning. And on Sunday mornings she expects me to do a sort of general housecleaning. I am getting so tired of it that I don't know what to do. I never have any time for any rest or fun. I am always on the go. She even expects me to cook most of the meals after I get home.

"My mother is not sick. She is perfectly well and has just reached the age of 40. She doesn't want to stay home. She doesn't want sick away from home either. And she takes all my pay, except $1 a week, for outlay. Don't you think she is treating me fairly? I am perfectly willing to take care of my own clothes and things and keep my bedroom tidy but I think all the rest of it is too much. What do you think?

"I want to pay my board, so I'll have some money of my own to spend. I want to pay her $5 a week. I only get $17.50 but she says I have to give her more. She wants me to give her $8. What do you think? Is that fair, or not?

"Please help me. I don't know what I should do.

"BETTY SUE."

Is Mother being fair?

About the board: yes. Eight dollars isn't too much to pay. You couldn't get it any place for less . . . and probably not for even so little. So why not pay her that and have the rest of your money for yourself.

Unfair About Work

But she isn't being fair about the work. No girl who works away from home for eight hours should be expected to come home and do the housework for any able-bodied mother. Is she were sick or very old, she might reasonably expect such a thing, but since she is neither, it's up to her to do her part, just as she expects you to do your part.

You need rest and time for fun and friends, and she has no right to deprive you of them by whining and expecting you to do her work for her. And when she does it, she is doing you an actual injustice. Don't let her get away with it, Honey.

Of course, that doesn't mean that you should quarrel with her. But it does mean that you should tell her, gently but firmly, that you've worked hard all day, and it isn't up to you to come home and do another day's work. And then stick to it. Take care of your own mending and keep your own clothes and bureau drawers neat and clean, pay her your board promptly, and then leave the rest to her. It's her job. It's not only her job but it's a job she'd expect you to do, if you were in her place.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Friday, March 6

A day of conflict and opposition must be presaged from the adverse lunar transits. There is likelihood of an abrupt and disruptive change, far-reaching in its issues, and attended by little of promise as to bettering either the position or financial affairs. It is a time for acting with much conservatism, precaution and sagacity in order to meet frustrating and difficult situations.

Those whose birthday it is stand at the threshold of a year of sudden and disruptive visitations, depending on their own personal sagacity, acumen and general good management as to the favorable outcome of affairs. There may be many difficult or baffling situations or tenacious obstacles to be overcome by calm and well-directed effort. Making changes after mature deliberation or postponing them may prove good astrological advice.

A child born on this day may have original talents and skill but may require a very sound and practical education to enable it to meet obstruction and opposition. Its native genius should be developed and well directed.

Older People must avoid Constipation

AS WE grow older the bowels become more sluggish. They don't get rid of all the waste. Some days they do not move at all. So older people need to watch their bowels constantly. Only by doing this can they hope to avoid constipation.

When your bowels need help, remember a doctor knows what is best for them, and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from the nearest drugstore. Syrup Pepsin is also a wonderful laxative for the whole family.

No restriction in habits or diet is necessary while taking Syrup Pepsin. Made from fresh, laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other valuable ingredients, it is absolutely safe. HAIR VARIETY

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

The subject of hair—"maiden's hair"—is one that never loses its profound fascination for the feminine occupants of the world. To a girl or a woman it's as honey-pot-to-the-bee as the ancient and everlasting matter of LOVE. What hair has been, what it is, and how it's going to be above all is a subject guaranteed to please!

Just now most hair is not an awkward length as you heard the world complaining of a year or more ago. Half the hair on the feminine head is shoulder length. Take a look at any precious chorus in bright array before the footlight rainbow. Loll on the chaise longue, and watch half your friends when they take down their hair to sleek up. Shoulder length. That fascinating length that looks so little-girl and princess-like; so feminine when let down, and to my mind, so pretty when wigged up.

The question seems to be HOW to wig it up enchantingly. The back of Araminta's head is mighty important under the circumstances. She wants her hair so-so long—but she wants the effect when "did" to be just as neat and as ship-shape as it was when it was cut like a boy's up the back. No straggling wisps, but a carven contour that makes a definite impression. The magic is to be able to TUCK UNDER with fetchingness and eclat!

I believe in variety in hair. Every girl's eyes are different from the next one's—they are not all buttonholes cut on a pattern. Every girl's nose is different from another's—not just a false one made on a mould. Every girl's face, her entire shape, and her mind and heart thrown in, are all, ALL different from the girl's next door. So WHY should her hair be done exactly like an army of other girls' is done. Every one knows that the girls of the movie and stage world have always pleased themselves in the matter of hair. No two are much alike except in a general way. It's the girl of society who cuts her hair to pattern, and the average artist is deadly weary of that eternal hair contour that faces him out of every magazine "ad" and social section, and out of the pages of the daily papers, that head carefully finger-waved with the inevitable scallop of hair on one side or the other of the forehead, another scallop or two on the cheek-bone and a bit of a knob in the back, with every head exactly the filling of that formula—and consequently exactly alike.

Finger-wave your hair, wear it the same length that all the rest are doing, but if you want to be yourself and beautiful think up something different and do your hair that way. If your hair looks best shining and plain and straight wear it that way and be brave! Look at Ann Harding's lustrous blonde hair and how it suits her. If you look most charming with a bit of fluff, whether Mimi Van der Muffin is wearing it so or not, wear it that way. The most charming women in the world are the ones who rather set a fashion than too humbly follow one.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mary Is Happy at Thought of Her "First Party."

As I looked at Mary's happy face and heard the caroling note in her voice as she said she never had been so happy in her life, I forgot all the annoyances which had been mine during the preparations for the party we were giving her, the first she ever had had.

Edith Fairfax's attempts to make Dicky jealous because of the flowers sent by Mr. Veritzen, and my employer's continual sounding of the personal note to me—even these, I told myself were bearable, if I could keep that ecstatic look in the face of my husband's lovely young niece.

"You needn't be afraid any longer," I told her smiling. "You aren't going to be late. You have what I believe you call 'scads' of time."

Her tenseness relaxed into a laugh.

"I know I'm the prize idiot," she said, "but I never was so excited in my whole life."

"If it's a sign of idiocy to be wildly excited over your first party," I began—

"Then there have been an awful lot of morons in the last thousand years or so," she finished with a gamin grin at me. "Oh! but my dress is too adorable to wear. It ought to be put in a glass case. Will you help me get it on, Auntie Madge? I'm afraid of rumpling this triumph of the hairdresser's art."

She gestured toward her coiffure, and then gave a little exclamation of dismay.

"But you haven't had your hair done, have you, Auntie Madge?"

I took off my hat and smilingly displayed the pins of a water wave concealed beneath it.

"Blessed be close hats," I said. I had this done 'between times' today, and the woman is coming up in a few minutes to finish the job."

She sighed with absurd relief and I realized that she was as concerned for my creditable appearance as she was for her own.

"But will you have time to dress?" she asked anxiously.

"Plenty." I assured her. "You're all ready except your gown, aren't you?"

"Ah-so-lute-ly," she said.

"Then don't put it on just yet. Instead slip on one of those sleeveless cotton morning frocks—I'm all ready to put one on, and then we'll slip on our motor coats and go downstairs to look over the dining room. Mr. Veritzen has planned a surprise for you in the dinner decorations, but it won't be in place until half after five."

"For me?" Mary echoed. "Yeah?" She drawled the word with gay impertinence, but there was no malice in the gibe, and she hurried on before I could reprove her. "But how perfectly spiffy. I'll bet it's a hummer, too. He never bakes a cake without putting at least three layers of icing on it. We won't have to stay long down there, will we? We want to be in the living room, here, before the first guest gets here. Have you seen the way Mrs. Underwood has fixed up your living room and hers? Aren't they adorable?"

"I haven't seen her apartment, but ours is certainly all you say." I told her, truthfully, for Lillian had been busy with the rooms where we were first to receive our guests, and to which they could come back after dinner and during the dance. I had sent her up some of the superfluous flowers, for I found I could not possibly use all that Philip Veritzen had sent, and she had disposed of them to great advantage. When I finally was ready except for my gown, I gave the last touches to my room which was to serve as a dressing room for the girls, and then went through the apartment, finding everything in place. I was careful not to disturb Dicky, for I knew that he would have time to dress—with his usual swiftness—before it was time for the guests to come, and I did not wish to risk his knowledge of my appointment with Mr. Veritzen to look at the "surprise" dinner decoration. I had skirted one danger, and scored a triumph when he agreed to my wearing Mr. Veritzen's corsage—in company with all the other feminine guests—instead of his own. But what his reaction would be to this meeting with my employer, I feared to guess.

Purnell's knock sounded on the door just as I had finished my inspection of the apartment.

"Mr. Veritzen asked me to tell you that the dinner table decoration has come," he said.

"Tell him that Miss Harrison and I will be right down," I said, speeding him with a tip.

"Come Mary," I said softly at her bedroom door. "Get into your motor coat. We're going down to the dining room, now."

"I doubt it," Mary retorted, grinning, as Dicky's voice sounded from his room.

"Madge! Madge! Where are you?"

Household Hints

When you start to beat eggs continue the job until you are finished. Never set them aside and come back later to finish the job. You will not have good results.

To thread an embroidery needle easily, take a short piece of sewing thread, put the two ends together and push through the eye of the needle; then put the yarn through the loop formed and pull both thread and yarn through the eye.

Broken needles, old safety razor blades, etc., should never be thrown away carelessly. Keep them in a tin can with cover till full; then, with the lid closed securely, they can be thrown out without danger to those handling them.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Brother's Duty and Privilege.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My brother was engaged recently. Now we were apparently supposed not to know of the engagement. The young lady was invited to our home for dinner, and she said nothing of her engagement, whether she was happy about it, or if we knew of it, or anything. My aunt thinks it was our place to congratulate her. But as we knew nothing of the engagement (you know my brother never told us outright) I thought it was her place to speak of it first. In fact I thought it was her place to at least invite my mother and father to her home and announce her engagement. What do you think? MARY.

I can't help feeling that there must have been some misunderstanding about this, that even you do not realize. Don't you believe so? Why the secrecy that your brother maintained even from his own family, and even when he and his fiancee were dining with you at the time the engagement was consummated? It seems strange.

However, it was not the girl's place to inform your family. . . It was distinctly your brother's place. Why not talk it over with him and ask him what he wishes you to do about this, if he wishes you to mention it to his fiancee, or what he wants to have you do? I can't feel that you or any member of your family should mention it to the girl until your brother has given you permission to do so. For if they wished to have it talked about they themselves would mention it.

Engagement Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When sending out engraved engagement announcements, will you please advise me which is the most preferable form to use? Both my parents are living. J. Z.

I never suggest the sending of engraved or printed engagement announcements. They are not in good form, and by people "in the social know," are never, never used. I hope that you will reconsider sending them, and that you will do what every well-bred bride-to-be does when she wishes her friends to know of her engagement. That is to tell your close relatives and close friends, and write charming notes to those who do not live near enough to be told by word of mouth.

Then, if your parents wish, it is perfectly correct for them to send to the local newspapers the formally worded announcement of your engagement. This is all that it is necessary to do, but, of course, it is correct, if you wish, to have any kind of announcement party.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

White spots in finger nails are said to be air bubbles. You can't prove it by us. How do air bubbles get there? It is a proven fact, however, that white spots are often caused by injury to the matrix.

For the girl who mourns about oily hair there is relief in frictioning the scalp with eau de cologne. Or sprinkling the hair with cornmeal and brushing it all away, though the frequent soap and water shampoo isn't to be overlooked. The topknot can be washed every week with no danger to the growth. A shampoo, followed by brisk friction of the scalp and exposure to sunlight, is an excellent scalp treatment.

As the finger nail grows out, it becomes dead tissue. It is white in color, and transparent. The pink glow is contributed by the blood streams underneath. The live part of the nail is in the matrix, that hidden portion which produces new cells.

Going to bed early, at a reasonable hour, makes for restful sleep, because there are fewer fatigue bugs to battle. When the human creature gets overtired sleep does not come quickly, nor is it sound and refreshing. In the sleeping room there should be a current of fresh ozone to scatter the cloud of stale air that hangs over the sleeper's head.

How to Treat Chronic Lead Poisoning.

Men constantly exposed to lead are likely to suffer from lead poisoning. It is common in lead-workers, house painters, gilders, artists and others who are brought in constant contact with the metal in one form or another.

Dr. Copeland

You will be surprised to learn that, in very small quantities, this metal is found in flour, beer, cider, wines, teas, vinegar, sugar and candies. It is found in numerous drugs, especially those manufactured by the aid of sulphuric acid.

In view of the rigid food regulations maintained by each state, we rarely find cases of such poisoning due to eating food. These precautions are applied, too, in the manufacture and sale of drugs.

Acute lead poisoning is not common. When it occurs it is seldom fatal. The symptoms come on suddenly. There is a metallic taste in the mouth with a burning sensation. There is a feeling of great dryness in the mouth and throat. Vomiting, followed by marked retching and pain in the abdomen, is another symptom. The pain and discomfort are stubborn and, though recovery occurs, it may be delayed for some time.

The chief sign of chronic lead poisoning is the general ill health that always accompanies it. The digestion is poor, the appetite lessens, and the bowels are upset. The skin assumes a peculiar color, often appearing almost yellow.

The gums frequently show a black streak, which is recognized as a sign of metal poisoning. Occasionally the teeth turn black. They become loose and are extremely sensitive to heat and cold.

A very common effect of lead poisoning is the weakening and paralysis of the muscles. The muscles of the arm and forearm are usually involved. Paralysis of the hand and fingers is most characteristic. The wrists droop down, producing a condition spoken of as "wrist drop." This is one of the most constant of the symptoms.

Advanced chronic lead poisoning may involve the eye, producing partial or total blindness. The kidneys may become affected.

In treating chronic lead poisoning, it is essential that the affected person be removed from all contact with lead. Rest, plenty of fresh air and sunshine, and nourishing food, are advised. Careful nursing and hygienic living usually restore the individual.

You either feel GOOD or you don't

Chief Connally had both these experiences

"I FELT weak and rundown. My color showed that my blood was very pale. I suffered from poor circulation. A Pathological Laboratory made a test of my blood, and the examination showed it to be 33% below normal. It was then that I decided to take a course of S.S.S.

"In about six weeks' time, after taking S.S.S. regularly, I had another blood test made, and it showed that my blood had been restored to normal. My appetite was greatly improved; so much so, that I could eat pork, and the like, without any discomfort. And to my surprise, my skin and complexion became clear as almost new, and like a child's.

"I think S.S.S. is the most wonderful blood medicine and tonic of its kind on the market today. It has so improved my circulation and the condition of my blood that it has made me feel like a young man again, although I am 56 years old."

You, too, will want this NEW STRENGTH

Every spring countless thousands take S.S.S.—the purely vegetable tonic—to build back their red-blood-cells so that they may have that new strength that makes for a keen appetite, firm flesh, a clear skin and greater resistance against infection and disease. MATCH INTENDED TO BOOST CARNERA

THERE IS NO particular reason why the 10-round bout between Primo Carnera and Jimmy Maloney, scheduled for tonight in Miami, should attract any attention outside the arena where it is fought, assuming that it will be worth much attention even there. It's only a meeting of a couple of third raters who are a considerable distance from the heavyweight championship row, and on its face it doesn't mean a thing. It will be no great credit to either principal to score a win over his opponent.

Jimmy Maloney

To make the thing even less attractive and even less worthy of the publicity that has been given to it, one of the fighters has already defeated the other. Maloney beat Carnera in 10 rounds at Boston on October 7 last, and that beating went farther than any other development on the Italian giant's circus tour of America to convince most fans that Primo has little more than size to recommend him.

THE ONLY REASON the promoters can have for bringing the men together again is a possible plan to build one of them up for a match in New York next summer either with Jack Sharkey or the winner of the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling championship affair. Why a victory for Maloney over Carnera, or a victory for Carnera over Maloney, should be considered as qualifying the winner for a title chance isn't exactly clear, but a little thing like that doesn't bother the modern fistic showmen when they think they can make a match draw.

It isn't difficult to guess in this connection that the big Eastern fight interests need a Carnera victory. It wouldn't help their plans a bit to Maloney were to be victorious again, as the time has passed when the public could be made to accept Jimmy as a title contender. But if Carnera should win decisively you may look out for a big smoke-up of an outdoor match in New York, with the freakish size of the vast Venetian, of course, being played as the main card to catch the fancy of the fightgoers.

IT IS TRUE that Carnera is under suspension in New York, but it is not at all unlikely that arrangements can be made to have that suspension lifted if Primo is needed as an attraction for a big summer show in Gotham.

That's about the only reason why there is any outside interest in tonight's bout. The fans are eager to see what is going to come off, and are watching intently to observe how it will be worked.

IN VIEW OF his previous victory over Carnera, Maloney it would seem, even in his washed up-state, ought to win again tonight without trouble, particularly as Carnera this time is reported to be fighting under the handicap of a bent rib, or something of the sort. But while Jimmy ought to win, it is by no means certain that he will. On the contrary it is hard to believe that the match would have been arranged at all if somebody interested had not felt pretty sure that Carnera would be the victor. They will need Carnera later, whereas they won't need Maloney, and they rarely make any matches that will hurt their own plans. It will be surprising, therefore, if Carnera doesn't win in some manner or other.

Leo Malarkey

THE FIRST-ROUND PLAY in the annual W. P. I. A. L. championship elimination basketball tournament will be brought to a conclusion tomorrow night, when Coraopolis High, of Section IX, and Duquesne High, of Section VII, clash in the Stadium. Scottdale and Brownsville meet tonight.

The initial round will come to a close with championship possibilities bunched like bananas. Scottdale is favored to win tonight, and Duquesne tomorrow night. If that happens, it will bring those two schools and New Kensington, McDonald, New Castle, Monessen, Scott High of North Braddock and New Brighton into the second round.

TO PICK FROM this list the semi-finalists in either bracket would be impossible. McDonald and Scott were the most impressive in their first-round tussles, though the defending champion, New Kensington, left little to be desired in its defeat of Swissvale.

Monessen and New Castle on Saturday night will inaugurate the second-round games, facing each other, with the outcome as much in doubt as is the identity of the eventual champion.

AMONG THE INDIVIDUAL players who have stood out in the contests to date, none has been more impressive than Leo Malarkey, McDonald's crack guard. Malarkey not only proved to be a whale of a point getter, ringing up a dozen points against Washington, but he gave a display of cool heady, floor play. For that matter, the whole McDonald team has been as impressive as any so far, presenting a well-drilled quintet, which passed as accurately as many college outfits that have appeared in Pittsburgh this season. Malarkey is the lad who came up with the basket that won the game for McDonald in the sultry extra period. What is more important, he was consistent, scoring in each period. He didn't make a bad pass all evening, and time after time he broke up well-intended Washington rallies which might have led to a fatal outburst of scoring.

IN A LETTER to President Barney Dreyfuss from Paso Robles, Manager Jewel Ens assures the club owner that he is now convinced there is no occasion to worry about the Pirate catching department for 1931, and as the only doubt about the Bues' strength centered around the receiving branch it would appear that the Corsair outlook is most encouraging.

The fact that Ens makes no mention of Steve Swetonic in his letter is taken to mean that th injury to the North Sider's pitching arm is not serious. Nor does Jewel appear to be at all concerned over L...y French's holdout. The manager says .ll the players in camp are hustling with renewed vigor and determination under the spur of a new incentive, as they are eager to make the best showing possible as a tribute to the memory of the late Sam Dreyfuss.

JACK QUINN, as peppery at 45 or more as any recruits in the Brooklyn camp, declares he is ready to pitch five innings right now. He reports that his arm gives him no trouble at all and that his legs feel just as strong.

Duffy Lewis

The veteran says that a couple of months ago he was not sure of himself, but that two weeks work at Hot Springs convinced him he can still win in the majors. At the Spa he pitched to Al Simmons, Bing Miller, Joe Boley and some others, and says Simmons told him he would be able, in his opinion, to go on pitching for two more years.

THE SIGNING OF Duffy Lewis, former star outfielder, as coach of the Boston Braves does not mean that Hank Gowdy is to be dropped, Manager Bill McKechnie makes it known. It is McKechnie's plan to have Gowdy give more time and attention to coaching the pitchers. Lewis will coach at first base and Wilkinsburg Bill at third. This will be the first engagement of Lewis in the National League. He was a member of the famous Red Sox outfield of Lewis, Speaker and Hooper, and after playing a prominent part in the pennant and world series victories of 1912, 1915 and 1916 he was transferred to the Yankees. Later, as manager at Salt Lake and Portland he developed such players as Tony Lazzeri and Johnny Frederick. Duffy makes another addition to a colony of old timers coming back to the big show this year, a colony that includes Otis Crandall, Jack Onslow, Shauno Collins, Chief Bender, George Burns, Jimmy Johnston and Rudy Hulswitt.

All except one of the first-round combats of the annual W. P. I. A. L. championship elimination tourney will be rubbed from the slate tonight. Brownsville, upholding the honor of Section XIII, and Scottdale, of stormy Section X, clash in a lower bracket game, the plum to be won being the honor of dashing into the second round and a game with the tourney favorite, Scott High, of North Braddock.

Scottdale plans to send a goodly number of fans into the city for tonight's struggle in the Stadium, but Brownsville is going at the matter in a big way. The "Unlucky Section" team is bringing a band, the South Brownsville High outfit, and a fife and drum corps from the Kramer Axton Post of the American Legion. A special choo-choo has been chartered, and the Brownsville fans are going to parade from the station to the City-County Building.

WON 12 GAMES

Brownsville sped through a 15-game schedule with an even dozen wins. South Brownsville, South Union and Georges Township were the only teams to upset the new champs, who replaced North Union as sectional representatives.

Scottdale represents Section X in the place of Uniontown, which went to the semi-finals last year, losing to New Kensington in a game that went four extra periods. Greensburg would have been here tonight, but the Westmoreland Countians were tossed out of the running on a technicality for playing an ineligible man and Scottdale annexed the honors.

The Scotties were returned victors in 18 out of 20 games, a truly impressive record. Mose Lantz, former Grove City football luminary, is coaching the Scots. He has a trio of stars in Eicher, an all-section forward; Stauffer, an all-section guard, and Rush, a center.

Ford City Bows

Another Ford City quest for W. P. I. A. L. championship laurels went haywire last night as this year's Purple and Gold entry from Section VI was bumped out of stride in the first round by an exceptionally well coached and very potent New Brighton team. The score of the game, which drew a good house, was 29 to 27.

Ford City skipped away in the first period as though there was going to be nothing to it, and at the end of the first eight minutes, was ahead by 9 to 5. Liberto, Bass, Ollinger and Ortman accounted for the points, Ortman sinking three out of five fouls and the others dropping in field goals.

Despite its speed, the Section VI team was unable to keep its early attack going, and a sustained and brilliant rally by New Brighton, led by Tom Hurley, the star of the ball game, Beitsch and Maybray gave the Beaver Valley team a 12-11 advantage at the half.

Hurley went wild in the third and fourth periods, and while Ford

MIAMI BOUT TONIGHT TO TAKE LOSS

MIAMI, Fla., March 5.—(AP.)—To the somewhat fantastic fistic history of this famous winter playground, the boys were prepared to add the 10-round battle of the cracked rib tonight, featuring the ponderous puncher from Italy, Primo Carnera, and the Irishman from Boston, Jimmy Maloney.

Miami and its ocean front neighbor, Miami Beach, have known the peak of boxing's boom days. Two years ago the Stribling-Sharkey bout drew more than $400,000. The downward slide since then has been marked by the Sharkey-Scott fiasco, a losing venture of 1930, and the financial distress attending the Walker-Risko show a week ago in the Madison Square Garden Stadium.

Carnera's return joust with Maloney has failed to stimulate either the local fistic pulse or the cash customers from elsewhere.

Promoter Frank J. Bruen continued optimistic today in the hope he might at least break even. An unseasonable drop in temperature has chilled the prospects for tonight.

Primo will have upwards of a 65-pound pull in the weights, a doctor in his corner to treat his damaged rib, and instructions to try for an early knockout.

The preliminary card is headed by an eight-round match between Maxie Rosenbloom, of New York, light-heaveyweight champion, and Marty Gallagher, of Washington, D. C. Rosenbloom's title is not at stake.

Promoter Bruen forbade ringside broadcasting and fixed the main go for about 10 p. m. (Eastern time).

BUCS MAY LOSE SWETONIC THREE MONTHS

Pittsburgh Sandlotters to Play for Locally-Owned Hazleton Club

STEVE TO HAVE OPERATION ON LAME ARM

By CHARLES J. DOYLE
Staff Correspondent.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 5.—Pitcher Steve Swetonic, of the Pirates, returned to the camp this morning after a hurried trip from Los Angeles, whither he had gone about 10 days ago for arm treatment. X-ray plates taken of his injured pitching elbow disclosed chipped bones which will require a surgical operation.

Swetonic landed in Paso Robles shortly after the breakfast hour. Soon after he went into a conference with Manager Jewel Ens regarding the advisability of returning to Pittsburgh for the treatment.

MAY STAY ON COAST

There is a possibility he will stay on the coast for the treatment but in any event, he is likely to be lost to the club for two or three months, according to the specialist who treated him in Los Angeles.

Swetonic denied that pus had formed, as was reported last night.

Swetonic has felt the stings of misfortune a lot in the past 12 months. He seemed to be on his way to a big season one year ago when appendicitis laid him low for more than two months. He had hardly got back when he injured a bone near his elbow. The somewhat mysterious ailment was treated during the winter, but as soon as he began to throw this spring the trouble returned. The Pirate trainers figured the wound was something out of the ordinary, and the X-ray proved this contention.

ENS SATISFIED

With Larry French a confirmed holdout and Swetonic lost, the slab prospects, which carried a rosette hue, have taken a turn the other way. French, doubtless, will pitch baseball this summer, but he seems to have incurred the bad graces of his employers for his latest holdout stunt, and when a Pittsburgh athlete does this, he very often is shipped away.

Opening day is far beyond the Eastern horizon as the Pirates turn their eyes in the direction of home, but if the season were to begin in a week, the Buccaneers would be ready after one of the most successful stretches of preparation the Pittsburgh representatives have yet experienced.

Manager Jewel Ens today surveyed his big squad and was convinced his athletes, including the first-string pitchers, have reached an extraordinary stage of conditioning. The second guard has been in camp only four or five days, yet these days have been accompanied by such exceptional weather the late arrivals are almost up to the pink degree attained by the early birds.

SMITH, MANOS IN FINAL

Smith eliminated Dave Olbum, Y. M. H. A., 21-14, 21-9, and Manos tripped Lou Alman, Y. M. H. A., 21-7, 21-19, yesterday. Alman is junior champion.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN, The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Tex Rickard was the softest mark the schemers ever ran into. I never knew a man who was so keen and so capable in ability to make big money who was such a mark for the come-on boys. He went for everything and anything. Those around him had to be eternally on their guard to keep Tex from falling for the blarney bunk.

Tex Rickard

When he came out of Chicago he was all het up over the fortune that lay in a shoe-polishing machine. He went for $10,000 before his associates got wind of it. I remember him coming into the Madison Square Garden after handling a record-beating show like the Dempsey and Tunney bout, trying to coax some of his newspaper friends to throw their money into it.

"Kain't miss making a million dollars for each of you," he said. "Just git yourself some cash together and we'll all wind up with plenty."

And I know that Tex was serious. He believed in the machine. He had dropped in one day to get his boots polished in Chicago and the Italian did the job with a home-made contrivance that did the job in jig time.

Tex asked the fellow about it and he admitted that he had not attempted to patent the machine. Tex went in for it. It cost him at least $10,000 and possibly a lot more before he finally was convinced that was was on a lob.

TEX THE "SUCKER"

One day a fellow came into the Garden with "one of the greatest inventions of all time—a puncture-proof tire." The schemer went on to say that "This tire will stand any test under the sun. All we need is capital to start her going. We've a factory in Rahway, but we lack funds. You can see for yourself that we have something worth while. Just get into my car. I've got her fitted out with a set of my non-puncture tires. Just come in and we'll go down to the river front. I'll show you something that'll knock your hat off."

Tex was in a fever right off the reel. Millions in it. He could see himself richer than any man that ever lived. If the fellow could have combined a potato juice fuel for motor cars in conjunction with his non-puncture tire, Tex would have unloaded.

At that he climbed into the fellow's car and the pair of them went down to the Hudson River front to see the invention through.

NON-PUNCTURE TIRES

Once there the great inventor got out and began to lay out his testing ground. He had boards with spikes sticking up out of them ready to ruin the best tires in the world. Broken glass, cemented to the boards, nails, barbed wire strips, pins and needles, and all those dainty things that find their way into the vitals of your tires were sprawled along the highway. A crowd gathered and Tex got a thrill. If the thing went over he would hand out the first advance and begin to sign up stock customers on the spot.

"Wonderful!" asked the inventor.

"Better than that. Never seed the like. Marvel of an idea."

"Now, Mr. Rickard, just step out of the car and see what my patent rubber has done to these nails."

Most of them were bent flat to the boards and the glass was crushed to dust.

As the chap busied himself with a more rigid test Tex looked down at the tires. They looked suspiciously heavy and rugged. Unconsciously, Tex took a poke at one of them with his cane. He couldn't even dent it. He kept poking and then discovered that the tires were SOLID RUBBER!

"IRISH PRODUCTS" IDEA

Tex turned on his heel, called a cab and was on his way back to the house he built.

That was the last of the non-puncture gank. Once was enough. You never could talk "rubber" to Tex after that.

Tex ran into a fellow around the old Garden who had a grand scheme. He was at the head of a gang that wanted to sell Tex an "Irish Products" idea. There was perfume made out of wild Irish roe, a cold cream with a shamrock tint, a shaving cream made from Irish moss and a lot of others that which was to be sold in attractive green boxes. On the Irish of the country being sure for customers.

Tex fumbled to the racket but so many of his staff had fallen for the stuff that even after Tex ordered them to keep out of the place they would wait downstairs until Tex went out in order to get back among those who had listened to the story of untold riches.

There was one person who came into Madison Square Garden who actually had a gold mine to sell.

A GIGANTIC FAUX PAS

An attractive young woman walked into Rickard's office one day and said she was trying to underwrite a show she had written.

"I know what I've got, Mr. Rickard," she told Tex. "I'm sure that it will go over big, but it takes money to put it on the boards. Everyone has turned me down. I'll let you in if you will advance me $7,500."

The door opened and in walked John Ringling.

"Here is a partner of mine. He is in the show business. He knows all about those things. Sell him an interest," said Tex.

"I'll let him in on the ownership of the production if he can advance $5,000," said the woman.

Tex told the woman he would go home and sleep on the idea and if she would come back on the morrow he would give his decision.

"She came back the next day," said Tex. "I told her I always had ducked that show angel business and wouldn't begin now.

"When I said those few words, I wished myself out of a fortune. The lady was Anne Nichols and the show she was trying to peddle to me was only 'Abie's Irish Rose.' It was on Broadway for four or five years and they stopped counting the receipts after it had grossed $8,000,000. Biggest mistake I ever made in my life."

"Me, too," said Ringling as he sat in the room listening to Tex tell the story.

OTHER "TAKE ARTISTS"

But Tex did play angel after all. He stuck $23,000 into the

KITTANNING, FREEPORT IN TILT TONIGHT

NEW KENSINGTON, March 5.—Franklin and Tarentum High Schools joined the group of favorites in the Allegheny-Kiski Valley tourney here last night by decisive decisions in the second round.

Franklin trounced Parnassus High, 30-19, while Tarentum set a new tourney scoring record by beating Oakmont, 40 to 21.

The consolation playoff also got started with Springdale clipping Falls Creek, 25-11; Leechburg toppling Verona, 29-22; Aspinwall drubbing Blairsville, 24-14, and Apollo walloping New Bethlehem, 25-6.

Two second-round games are carded this evening, Kittanning facing Freeport and Har-Brack opposing Arnold.

TECH BOXERS MEET W. VA.

Intercollegiate fisticuffing will make its second appearance in Pittsburgh tonight, one-half the cast being the same that aided in ushering it in two weeks ago. Carnegie Tech's mitt slingers engage those of West Virginia in a return bout, the jabbing and walloping to begin at 8:15 in the Tartan gym.

Carnegie's battlers have engaged in two meets, one with West Virginia in Morgantown and one with Syracuse here. The locals lost 'em both, but exhibited such improved form in the second series of battles with the Orange that they may be counted upon to give the Mountaineer mitt slingers strenuous opposition tonight.

Tomorrow night Pitt's varsity and freshman ringmen make their debut as a college team, engaging the H. T. Little Club, of Homestead, in Sokol Hall.

STAR BATTERY, INFIELDER TO GO EAST

By TOM BIRKS

With the Salzman brothers, of the South Hills, entering the baseball field in the role of magnates, as owners of the Hazleton club, of the New York-Pennsylvania League, and their retention of Hubie Fitzgerald, former local sandlot star, as manager, it appears that the eastern club will have quite a "Pittsburgh complex."

It had been known for some time that the deal was pending, and Fitzgerald, who is making an effort to get brother Jeff from the Albany club, is to take other former local sandlot players to Hazleton.

Whitey Latusick, catcher, of McKees Rocks, and Joe Semler, local pitcher, will start the season with Fitzgerald. Semler was with Homewood in the City League last season. Elmer Kestner, former Homewood shortstop, also is reported to be heading for Hazleton.

THOMPSON VICTOR

Sport Vignettes

Because of his financial possibilities in the heavyweight promotion scheme of things, if for no other reason, Primo Carnera should win his return bout with Jim Maloney at Miami tonight . . . . This despite the fact that Maloney holds a decision, deserved or otherwise, over the Man Mountain and Primo is supposed to be suffering from an injured rib or two . . . Ordinarily one would think the cards were stacked against a man in Carnera's position, even conceding him an edge on his great bulk and taking into consideration that Maloney is a well-washed-up third rater at best. . . . However, it is a fact that Carnera is matched to box the winner of the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling title bout along in September and must erase that defeat by Maloney to qualify for this tussle. . . . And, if Maloney were going anywhere, he would not be fighting Carnera again after having once beaten him. . . . Yes, sir, bad ribs or not, Carnera figures to win this one, and any other result will come in the nature of a considerable shock.

One of these days, and it won't be long now, the impression will become more or less general that Mickey Walker, the middleweight champion, who has just beaten Johnny Risko twice, can beat all of the present crop of heavies, with the possible exception of Jack Sharkey. . . . For one thing, the short, stocky Celt wouldn't be a bad short-end bet against the towering Carnera. . . . It's easier to hit up at a big target than it is to hit down at a little one, as Jack Dempsey demonstrated against Jess Willard, who was as big as Carnera, and Dave Shade, then a welterweight, proved when he knocked out Jimmy Slattery, the light-heavyweight. . . . And, besides, Mickey knows how to box and fight and belt 'em. . . . He does better against the big fellows than he does against men of his own size.

Jack Sharkey likes Stribling to beat Schmeling when they meet over the 10-round route for the heavyweight title, but says he would favor Schmeling in a 15-rounder . . . George Tilicky is the proper name of Jimmy Belmont, the Braddock welterweight, who is going so well just now.

The West Liberty Teachers' College football team, of West Virginia, turned in two achievements during the 1930 campaign that ought to be records if they aren't . . . The eleven completed 112 passes in 128 attempts, and cashed in on 27 tries-for-point and yet never kicked one . . . And the team should be even better next fall . . . Only two letter men are lost from the 1930 squad and both were substitutes . . . Bill Muldoon, the Solid Man of the New York Athletic Commission, orates a mouthful when he says, apropos the King Tut-Billy Petrolle squawk, that it isn't wise to pay to much attention to the bleating that the fight was the bag . . . "Almost every upset of the dope brings these reports," he says, "and they emanate from the small-time gamblers, who yell more over losing a $2 bet than the real gamblers do over losing $200,000."

One thing about Cliff Battles, the West Virginia Wesleyan football and all-round star—he knows his place . . . He doesn't want to be a round peg in a square hole, or vice versa, so it is natural that he should go to Army, where he will be at home with his name . . . And what a sweet-running back he is!—HARRY KECK.

SQUASH PLAY CARDED

The city singles squash racquets championship will begin on the courts of the Keystone Athletic Club Saturday, under the direction of the Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association. It will continue for a week. In the first round W. B. Wolfe will meet Don McClutchegn, J. Scott Burke meets Alex Robinson, and C. A. Fagan, Jr., plays Dr. Dave O'Loughlin.

HAFEY LIKELY TO SIGN CARD CONTRACT

BRADENTON, Fla., March 5.—(AP.)—Although Chick Hafey still is in California holding out for more pay, Manager Gabby Street, of the Cardinals believes the slugging outfielder will come to terms and be a regular again this year.

JACKETS TO INVADE

REISE TO QUIT HOSPITAL FOR WINDSOR TRIP

By CARL W. SHATTO

Leo Reise, one of the defense aces of the Yellow Jackets, is determined to be in the party when the local skaters leave tonight for Windsor, where they are to meet the Bulldogs in an International Hockey League game tomorrow.

Last Tuesday, while his mates were absorbing a 5-1 defeat in Cleveland, Reise was a patient in the Mercy Hospital here. Leo is suffering from an attack of tonsilitis. He was able to sit up yesterday, and this morning he said that he was determined to quit the hospital late today and join the departing party of skaters this evening.

LEO EAGER TO RETURN

Roy D. Schooley, president and manager, and Charles Reid, coach, are eager to have Reise return to the lineup for the games that mean so much to Pittsburgh's chances of getting into the International League title play-offs. Leo is equally eager to bet back into harness. He will be placed under a doctor's care while in Windsor, and will slip away from the medico only long enough to assist in the business of turning back the Bulldogs.

The score of the Cleveland game indicates that Reise's services are badly needed. The Tuesday night fray marked the first time in a month that the Jacket defense had been pierced for more than three goals. Roger Smith and Art Berlett, pinch-hitting for Reise, are willing workers, but neither can match Leo in the matter of speed. He is one of the fastest backfielders on skates.

LAST VISIT

Tomorrow's game will mark the final Pittsburgh-Windsor battle of the season. The Jackets can get an even break in the season series by turning in a triumph, and a victory also will give them a pretty fair chance to finish the week's campaigning in fourth place. London, now in a fourth place tie with the locals, figures to beat Detroit tomorrow, but the Tecumsehs are likely to annex nothing better than a defeat when they invade Buffalo on Saturday.

At the conclusion of tomorrow's battle only two games will remain on Pittsburgh's "away" slate. Three more frays are to be played at home, of which the first will be with Cleveland, next Tuesday.

production of "Ringside," and it didn't last more than a few weeks.

One fellow wanted to place 51 per cent of the stock of "a marvelous engine" in Rickard's hands and make him president. Tex was steered away from that fellow, but only after the "skin" was on his way to jail for using the mails to defraud. Another get-rich quick fellow had a Panama Canal Zone concession to sell. He came in one day after pestering Tex for a month. This time he brought the blue prints along with him and they were so large that he couldn't get into the elevator with them.

"A $10,000,000 idea," he told Tex, "and we'll both be rich."

Tex went down into the cellar with him where the fellow could unroll the prints and, after listening for a while, Tex gave "the $10,000,000" man one of his old overcoats, he felt that sorry for him.

These bunco men knew that Tex was a hot touch. The word had been passed along. They thought all that Tex had to do was to turn a crank and the yellow bills would go fluttering into space.

BROWNSVILLE, SCOTTDALE PLAY

City rallied and twice tied the score, once at 18-all and later at 20-20 as the final period started, the Red and Gold, so clever drilled by Coaches Ken Heider and Rorak, pounded down the stretch to win by a figurative length.

With 30 seconds left to play, Brighton was in the van by two points, the score reading 27-25. Hurley popped his sixth goal to make it 29. Just as the gun ended the game Ortman, high scorer for Ford City, threw one from the outfield to slice the Brighton advantage to one goal.

Hurley, with six field goals, three fouls, and an evening of astonishingly consistent floor play was the high scorer and star of the game and of the tournament so far. Beitsh, the rangy center, wasn't far behind him in effectiveness, getting four buckets.

Bass, Ford City's Negro center, who turned in fine performances last year and the year previous, when Ford City made other attempts in the Stadium, had an off night. He was effective only in the third period, zipping three passes in a row to teammates that enabled Ford City to tie the score.

New Brighton will meet New Kensington in a second round game next Monday evening. The lineup:

New Brighton—29		Ford City—27
Maybray	F	Liberto

INDEPENDENT GAMES LEAD FLOOR CARD

By JULIUS LEVIN

Independent clubs will hold the spotlight in local basketball circles tonight. The Fintex team, not disheartened by the crushing defeat suffered at the hands of the Duquesne Lafayettes in the opening game of the County League playoff series, plays its second contest of the week by engaging East Liverpool in the Ohio City. Tomorrow night Fintex will meet the crack Renaissance Club, of New York, at the South Side Market House.

Ziggy Kahn takes his Irene Kaufmann Settlement House passers to Jeannette tonight to oppose the County Leaguers of that town in a non-league battle, while two attractions will be offered the followers of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, the varsity engaging the Lorain Ex-Hy Club, while the varsity B entertains the Howard Francis Club.

The Ray E. Schneiders, champions of the West Penn League, engage the W. U. Hoyles at North Side Moose Hall in a league encounter.

Washington County Play Opens Saturday

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 5.—Drawings have been made for the annual basketball tournament for boys of Washington County high schools to begin here Saturday. Twenty-three teams are listed for competition in first, second and third classes.

Six teams are entered in class III; 10 in class II, and seven in class I. Contrary to expectations, both McDonald and Bentleyville, winners in Sections XIV and XVI, respectively, of the W. P. I. A. L. chase, are entered in the competition. It had been thought these teams would not take part, due to conflicting dates with play in the W. P. I. A. L. tournament being conducted in Pittsburgh.

SPORT SHORTS

ORMOND BEACH, Fla.—J. W. Marsh, of Pittsburgh, finished well up among the leaders in the Old Guard golfing competition held here yesterday. He turned in a 79 for the first nine and a 39 for the last nine. The event was won by E. W. Van Houten, of Suffern, N. Y., who led the field with a 34.

NEW YORK.—(INS.)—Tom McArdle, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, has announced he has closed a 10-round bout between kid Francois, Italian featherweight, and Fidel La Barba, former flyweight champ, at the Garden for April 1.

OSLO, Norway.—(AP.)—Although Bernt Evensen, of Norway, broke three world ice skating records in one race, he may not be recognized as holder of the new marks. The 5,000 meter race in which the record smashing feats were performed was not held under International Skating Association rules. Evensen skated the 5,000 meters in eight minutes 11 1-5 seconds, his time for two miles was 5.18 and for three miles 7.37.

CHARLEROI, Pa.—Harry Gumbert, 20-year-old moundsman, left yesterday for Gulfport, Miss., to join the Baltimore Orioles, and to experience his first season in spring training. He was signed by the Orioles, who bought the lanky hurler from the Charleroi Governors last year. He worked in seven games during the fag end of the season.

ST. LOUIS.—(AP.)—The condition of Ban Johnson, former baseball leader, was described today as "unchanged." He has been growing slowly weaker, however, and his chances for recovery are slight, his physician, Dr. Robert Hyland, said.

MEADVILLE, Pa.—(AP.)—Cambridge Springs won the Crawford County Class B high school basketball championship here last night by defeating Summit Township, 39 to 21.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla.—(AP.)—Francis Hedfield, Wisconsin state champion, eliminated Helen Hicks, Hewlett, L. I., 1 up, 20 holes, in the first round of the Florida East Coast championship yesterday. Only two of five British stars came through the first round. They were Diana Fishwick, who beat Edith A. Wilsey, Chicago, 8 and 7, and Kathleen Garnham, who defeated Marian Hennett, New Britain, Conn., 2 up. Jessie Firth, London, lost to Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., 3 and 2. Betty Ivy Perkins, another Briton, bowed to Mrs. Melvin Jones, Chicago, 1 up, and Majorie White, London, was defeated, 8 and 7, by Virginia Van Wie, Chicago.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., —(AP.)—Harvard athletic officials announced today a baseball game had been scheduled with Princeton at Princeton on April 20.

Between Rounds

Promoter Apples Meyers, of the Moose Temple, has rounded out a good card for his weekly show in the downtown arena tomorrow night with the signing of Jack Tracey, North Side Negro middleweight, to oppose Jimmy Taylor, of Cleveland, in his semi-final. Taylor stopped Al Becker at the Moose last Friday, while Tracey knocked out Billy Flanagan, of Braddock, in the first round at the Garden Tuesday. Moe Butch and Marty Golubox the main bout, Marty Gornick and Tiger Joe Clark are in the second event and Don Frazier and Paul Balint open the Moose show.

Joe Glick boxes Teddy Palacios at San Francisco tomorrow night. Pat Haley and Young Ketchel are billed in Philadelphia the same night.

Tony Herrera, Mexican lightweight star, is in line for a non-title bout with Tony Canzoneri, the champion, at the Stadium in Chicago, March 20.

Johnny Dunn, New Kensington featherweight, is confined to bed with grippe and has canceled his bout with Young Baldermo at Zanesville, O., next Monday night.

Frank Borjorski, Erie sensation, boxes Ken Hargrave, of Akron, Ohio, in the semi-final to the Tiger Joe West-Jack McVey bout at Franklin, Pa., tomorrow night.

HOLT TO BOX MICKEY DURIS

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Billy Holt, hard-hitting Negro welterweight, of Homewood, and Mickey Duris, of Johnstown, will box the eight-round semi-final to the third meeting between Jackie Rodgers, local Negro featherweight, and Johnny Datto, Cleveland Filipino, in the Motor Square ring next Monday night, Matchmaker Jules Beck announced today. Bobby Ray, of the Hill, and Joey Spiegel, of Uniontown, will box the second bout.

Incidentally, arrangements will be made to get the seating capacity of the Garden back to normal in time for this show. Because of the brief time available after the food show moved out of the building last Saturday night, it was impossible to get one of the largest bleacher sections in place in time for the Midget Wolgast-Willie Davies show Tuesday night, and, as a result, almost 1,000 persons were turned away when the available seats were filled and standing room was taboo by order of the boxing commission. The gate totaled almost $5,400 for the show, and it is estimated another $1,500 was offered at the box office with no tickets to be had.

Matchmaker Beck is working to bring Wolgast back here after his fine showing against Davies, and may succeed in closing for a battle between the flyweight champion and Archie Bell at an early date.

Foreign Companies Aid Air Brake

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

EARNINGS OF THE WESTINGHOUSE Air Brake Company do not include the equity in the earnings of its associated foreign companies beyond dividends actually paid. This was pointed out in the organization's annual report made public today.

While no indication was given of the extent of this undistributed equity, it is generally believed to be large since the foreign companies have enjoyed an exceptionally heavy volume of business in recent years.

The Air Brake Company's report showed net profit after depreciation, taxes and other charges of $6,496,841, equivalent to $2.05 a share on 3,172,110 capital shares. This compared with $8,822,711 or $2.78 a share in 1929.

Foreign Companies Busy

IN THEIR REMARKS to stockholders accompanying the annual report, H. H. Westinghouse, chairman, and A. L. Humphrey, president, said:

"The foreign companies in which your company is interested, through its holdings in the Westinghouse International Brake and Signal Company, have had a satisfactory year. The French and Belgian railways some time ago adopted our type of brake for application to their freight cars, and our companies in those countries are, therefore, assured a good volume of business until all their cars are equipped. Other European countries are at the present time considering the application of brakes to their freight cars, and while several types are being offered in addition to our own, we are confident of securing our proportion of this new business. Both the London and Italian companies also show substantial earnings with good prospects for the future."

Purchased Own Stock

THE BALANCE SHEET showed that the Westinghouse Air Brake Company has invested $975,345 in its own capital stock at a price yielding about 5.2 per cent at the present dividend rate.

Extensive additional installations of the Union Switch and Signal Company's continuous system of cab signalling were made during the year and this system has shown satisfactory operating results on the 18 railroads on which it is in service. Installations of centralized traffic control systems have been made for operating signals and switches over extended areas on 17 railroads. It is expected that this system will result in a continuously increasing business on account of its outstanding contribution toward railroad operating economies.

New Orders Expected

ADDITIONAL ORDERS are on hand and further contracts are in prospect for large terminal interlocking facilities, automatic block signalling systems and car retarders. Orders for large installations of interlocking block signals for subways also are pending.

Prospects for the present year are largely dependent on sustained improvement in general business conditions according to the report. The company started 1930 with a large volume of air brake orders on its books which kept operations at a high rate for the first half of the year. The business depression was responsible for a severe curtailment in railroad buying. The release of additional orders for the replacement of rolling stock is expected to follow any marked improvement in economic conditions which would affect railroad operations.

The balance sheet showed a strong financial position with current assets of $46,093,487 against current liabilities of $3,789,772. Cash amounted to $8,768,640 and marketable securities to $20,452,983. Investments in stocks and bonds of other companies, which were not included in current assets, amounted to $8,213,145.

McKeesport Tin Plate Shows Steady Growth In Earnings

Steady growth has been shown in the net earnings of McKeesport Tin Plate since 1923. In that year, the company reported $376,450, while last year the net amounted to $2,503,897, compared with $2,402,200 in 1929. Per share earnings also were higher, being $8.34 on the 300,000 shares last year, against $8 on the same amount of stock in the preceding 12 months. It is significant that the company's net earnings have shown growth despite the fact that net sales have fluctuated at times. McKeesport produces about 10 per cent of all the tin plate used in this country and has a good outlet through the Metal Package Company.

Despite the depression in general business last year, North American showed an increase of slightly less than 1 per cent in net income for the year. On the basis of the shares outstanding on December 31, last, profits were equal to $4.36 a share, compared with $4.82 on a smaller capitalization in 1929. Operations of subsidiaries are confined largely to electric light and power, but the system has facilities for the manufacture and distribution of gas and controls some traction properties.

Wall street is attaching considerable importance to the apparent control over receivables exercised by the management of the International Harvester. Because of conditions in agricultural districts, it was the popular belief that that item in the 1930 balance sheet would show a substantial increase. Other companies had that experience. However, in the case of Harvester, the receivables last year actually were about 1 per cent under the total on December 31, 1929.

Several commission houses have been calling attention to the sound long-pull prospects of Continental Can. The company has made marked progress in the last few years, extending its activities and expanding production in territory where it appeared profitable. While it is too early for important interests to venture a forecast for the current year, the feeling in authoritative quarters is that substantial profits will be recorded over the next few years under the present aggressive management.

R. D. Matthews, executive vice president of Union Oil Company of California, told stockholders that the present net price of gasoline is practically at cost of production. The same would apply for California companies generally. The present retail price of 14½ cents includes a four cent differential to dealers and a three cent tax. Mr. Matthews said earnings during January were sufficient to cover dividend requirements for that period and that although actual figures were not yet obtainable for February, he believes dividends were covered during this period. Mr. Matthews stated the company has over $18,000,000 in cash and government and other bonds.

The monthly statement of the Steel Corporation setting forth the total of unfilled orders on its books as of the end of February will be made public at noon next Tuesday. Preliminary forecasts now making their appearance indicate that the figures will show the first contraction reported for February since 1927. It will be, incidentally, the first decrease reported since September of last year, if current forecasts are borne out by the official figures. The corporation reported an increase of 188,755 tons for January, and in February last year the increase was 11,038 tons, with a gain of 34,854 tons having been shown for the second month in 1929. It is calculated that the mills have been operating at a high rate currently to meet the call for immediate shipments by consumers, which has included some specifications against business booked prior to the beginning of February.

Consider Silver Futures Market

NEW YORK, March 5.—A committee of the National Metal Exchange of New York has been appointed to consider the advisability of establishing a silver futures market. Years ago there was such a market on the New York Stock Exchange, but it was abandoned because demand was slight. However, silver has since become an important industrial commodity and sponsors of the new plan believe a futures contract might be useful. There is virtually no speculation in silver except in the Orient and dealings in futures at New York are very irregular.

Ford Inquires for 290,000 Tons Ore

DETROIT, March 5.—An inquiry for 290,000 tons of iron ore for delivery in 1931 has been put in the market by Ford Motor Company. This is 40,000 tons below the 1930 inquiry, but the difference probably will be made up by the Ford mines.

Real Silk Hosiery Plans Capital Boost

MARKET TAKES EMPHATIC UPTURN

Bull Offensive Centers In Utilities and Rails After List Opens Heavy

NEW YORK, March 5.—(AP.)—The bear forces, after having things pretty much their own way for five days, were forced to yield before a bull offensive centering in the steels and utilities in today's stock market.

The brightening of the share market represented in part a somewhat tardy response to the adjournment of Congress, but a real bull celebration failed to appear. In the main, it appeared to reflect a correction of excessive bearishness. Speculative sentiment, fickle and largely unreasoning, had grown as gloomy as it was buoyant a week ago.

Further selling in the rails and miscellaneous shares gave the list a heavy tone in the morning, but selling soon shrank to meager proportions and the market turned emphatically upward in the middle of the day.

The rail issues appeared largely to have discounted the adverse dividend actions of the previous day.

Wall street regarded the adjournment of Congress as bullish both for the rails and utilities. It was pointed out that no action to hamper the four-party eastern railway consolidation plan had been taken. With rail earnings holding at low levels, however, and doubt over maintenance of other dividends remaining, bullishness was applied primarily to the utilities.

The heavy selling of the carrier issues yesterday had obscured the favorable aspects of the weekly steel trade reviews. While the uptrend in the industry has lacked vitality and earnings are anything but satisfactory for most producers, there is much confidence in further acceleration during the latter half of the year, and some quarters were more hopeful today of better prices for steel products for the second quarter.

The money market remained firm. There was no call money available under 1½ per cent, and loan calling was fairly heavy.

Forbes

Huge Profits On Bethlehem Steel Stock.

—By B. C. FORBES—

HOW MUCH can an executive of a large business be worth?

Whenever it is published that certain men are paid $100,000 or $250,000 or $500,000 or more than $1,000,000 a year, a howl of protest arises. It is terribly difficult for those of us not in the half-billion or million-dollar class to believe that any man is worth tremendously more than we ourselves are worth. It kind of hurts our pride.

Mr. Forbes

Yet the fact is that more men than we have fingers and toes receive a million dollars a year.

Why? Presumably because they are worth it. Do you know of any corporation that pays a man an enormous salary because of the color of his eyes or hair or because of the shape of his mouth or nose? I don't.

MUCH HUBBUB is being raised by opponents of Bethlehem Steel—and more recently by a few Bethlehem Steel stockholders—because the dynamic genius mainly responsible for that corporation's growth has shared in the profits to the extent of more than a million dollars a year in good times. Such payments are branded a "revelation." The insinuation is that a scandal of long standing has been uncovered.

The truth is that for many years Charles M. Schwab, founder of Bethlehem Steel, has openly boasted that Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, has frequently earned upwards of a million dollars in prosperous years. Instead of being ashamed, Schwab has been proud of it.

SEVERAL MONTHS ago I wrote:

"Nearly fifteen years ago Mr. Schwab told me, and I published the fact, that in banner years Mr. Grace's remuneration exceeded a million dollars. Mr. Schwab has always declared with great emphasis that Gene Grace is much the ablest steel man in America—'He's twice the steel man I've ever been or will be,' Mr. Schwab has repeatedly proclaimed.

"Everything in this world is relative. A million dollars a year does sound like a gigantic income for any executive.

"But consider how many men at the head of enterprises much smaller than our great modern corporations have made many millions of dollars.

"Admittedly, such men have usually owned all or a large part of their concern. In most instances, however, such ownership has been derived from profits earned by the business. As a matter of fact, it is quite common for leading executives nowadays to put the bulk of their savings into the stock of their corporations—James A. Farrell, for example, was revealed as one of the principal individual stockholders in his United States Steel Corporation.

"Surely the responsibilities of the president of a mammoth corporation, employing hundreds of millions or even a billion of capital and employing many thousands of workers, are greater than those of a man running a much smaller enterprise. Yet there is no outcry when the latter accumulates a large fortune.

"The era of individual ownership is passing. The era of huge corporations has arrived. Is it unfair that a man who would have been capable of amassing a fortune as the owner of his own business should be compensated relatively as well when he administers successfully the affairs of a much more important enterprise of the modern type?

"Could all the facts be studied, it would be found, I am confident, that profit-sharing, generous profit-sharing, has proved an excellent thing for corporations and their owners—the stockholders."

HAS PROFIT-SHARING proved profitable or ruinous for Bethlehem Steel stockholders?

Had you purchased 100 shares of Bethlehem common stock in 1906 at $25 a share, you would have received 200 more shares in 1917 for nothing. On your investment of $2,500, your cash dividends would have amounted to $22,000 and the market value of your 300 shares would now be approximately $20,000. Your profit from cash dividends and increase in market value would thus have been close of $40,000.

Your total dividends and appreciation would have equaled $15.50 per share each year, equivalent to an average annual return of 62 per cent on your original investment at $25 a share, or $2,500.

If you had waited until the year Mr. Grace was elected president, in 1913, and bought Bethlehem shares, you would have had an average annual return of 86 per cent on your investment.

"I HAVE shares in a few companies. If by paying the president each a $1,000,000 or more a year I could be assured of 62 per cent or 86 per cent a year on my money, I would be strong for profit-sharing. Wouldn't you?

Mary Lou Loses Patience With Young Lorrimer

CHAPTER XVIII.

Christmas at Westwood House, that year, was to be a great event. It was the first Christmas, since Travers Lorrimer's return from France, that his mother felt she could throw herself whole-heartedly into the festive preparations. She had very much to be thankful for. In the first place, Lorrimer was decidedly better, he had not had one of his nervous seizures since that of the day of Mary Lou's arrival. He continued to eat and to sleep better and was much in the open air. He was beginning to laugh again, to put on weight and to tolerate the presence of other people, outside of those of his household. Tolerate is the exact, most descriptive word, as he did not, as yet, genuinely welcome them.

But, as his mother had told him it was not fair to Delight to keep her a virtual recluse from her kind, he accepted the occasional visits from outsiders, notably those of Jenny Wynne and her frivolous crowd, and contented himself in thinking that it was for Delight's sake. The mere fact that he had begun to think of the happiness and comfort, the pleasure and welfare of another person beside himself was a very excellent sign that he was becoming more normal, more "human," as Mary Lou expressed it to Dr. Mathews.

Lorrimer Depressed

Then, too, Margaret Lorrimer was able to go about more, to see her old friends, to have them, now and then, in her house. And she herself was happy in Mary Lou's companionship which she found unfailingly friendly, sunny, affectionate and understanding.

Shortly before Christmas Mrs. Lorrimer and Mary Lou permitted themselves several mysterious trips to New York. Lorrimer grumbled, but only half-heartedly. A few months earlier and he would have been overtaken with such a panic of nerves on being left alone that his mother, whatever had been her plans, would have cancelled them, rather than distress him. As it was, the first time they left him for the entire day, they found him, on their return, wandering restlessly about, unhappy and nerve-ridden. He could not seem to shake off the depression which had seized him the instant of their departure and it took all Mary Lou's diplomatic chatter to win him back, at dinner time, to something more approaching his recent self.

Later Mrs. Lorrimer commented doubtfully upon this reaction and wondered if they should go on with their Christmas plans, which included other trips to town. But Mary Lou suggested that it was wise for him to accustom himself to these perfectly natural absences on their part. So, more or less ignoring his uneasiness, they went again . . . and yet again. On one occasion they saw a popular matinee, after their shopping, and upon another Mary Lou made a flying trip to Oakdale, armed with many bundles marked "Do Not Open Until Christmas!"

Billy greeted her with pleasure but some abstraction. He had acquired a passion for his teacher in school and had made a number of intimate friends among his school fellows including one litt'l' girl with curly hair and a way with her. So that Mary Lou was relieved to find that, after all, he did not miss her especially, although he was glad to see her, relieved, and a little hurt, being human. She found Adelaide with six interesting new symptoms and as many new pounds. And Gram as active and bustling and devoted to her entrancingly invalid daughter and lively, healthy grandson as well.

Christmas Spirit

Adelaide demanded chapter and verse of Mary Lou's companions and was terribly disappointed when Mary Lou was unable to report any malignant disease or mania. However, Adelaide insisted that, on her arrival, Mary Lou wash her hands vigorously in some newfangled disinfectant which was the invalid's latest adoration, "for," said Adelaide, gloomingly, "you can't be sure you haven't brought some infection with you!"

On still another trip to town Larry joined Mary Lou for lunch as Mrs. Lorrimer had a call to pay and a luncheon engagement to keep. And he promised her, over the table at one of their old time favorite "Woppers," that he would come out for Christmas day.

Upon each occasion, if they separated during the day, Mrs. Lorrimer and Mary Lou met at some appointed place and motored back to Westwood together.

Shortly before Christmas Lorrimer wandered into the morning room where Mary Lou was busy with packages, sitting on the floor in a muddle of twine, gilt cord, red ribbon and colorful papers, starred with gold and silver. Tags and labels lay strewn all about her and she was having a perfectly glorious time. Mrs. Lorrimer had been watching and helping her, for like all very nice women, she had never outgrown her childhood thrill at the Giving Season, and had just left the room. Mary Lou looked up from her gay welter and litter and laughed at Lorrimer's expression.

"Well," said Lorrimer, "you have changed, haven't you?"

"Why?" she asked him, experiencing, as always, that strange constriction of the heart which came to her each time he referred to the real Delight and his intimate knowledge of her.

"Why, one of the first things you ever said to me—we were talking about Christmas—was that you thought it was 'a lot of eye-wash,' except for children."

Loses Temper

What a really unpleasant girl the genuine Delight must have been, thought Mary Lou, and felt suddenly horrified that Lorrimer could confuse the two of them. It hurt her pride!

"Did I?" Well," she answered, smiling, "I suppose at that age it must have been the fashion to be cynical and all that. I've changed as you suggested . . . slipped back to second childhood, perhaps. I'm having a perfectly elegant time! And you'll have to get over your cynicism, too, for your mother and I will need you to help trim the tree. And you just can't back out of it, you're exactly the right height!"

"Just as you say—but it is a lot of nonsense . . . commercialized as the devil—a red-letter day for department stores," he remarked.

Mary Lou sat back on her heels and surveyed him.

"Gosh!" she said. "I'm certainly sorry for you, Travers Lorrimer!"

He flushed, shrinking in his oversensitiveness from the least hint of criticism.

"Now why, exactly?" he managed to ask.

"If you don't know," she replied cryptically, "I'm sorrier for you than ever! Your mother has a list of poor families she always gives to every Christmas. Lots of these things go into the baskets;" she indicated near-by dolls, drums, skates, mechanical toys of all kinds. "There'll be food too and fruit and all. This year she is going to take things to town herself and I'm going with her. I think," suggested Mary Lou, smiling up at him, "that you couldn't give her a lovelier gift than to go with her!"

He moved uneasily.

"I hate crowds," he muttered, "and misery—"

Mary Lou rose suddenly to her feet, scattering the paper and ribbons like a gay wild rain of oversized confetti.

Her temper was always hot and quick, although, as a rule, she had it under control. But today she lost it . . . or mislaid it temporarily. If she hadn't liked him so much she wouldn't have cared to such a degree. But she did care. The dark blue of her eyes was black with disappointment.

"I'm ashamed of you," she told him, unsteadily but clearly. "Why don't you snap out of it, Lorry—and think of other people besides yourself? Think, for instance, of your mother and her life with you, all these years. Think of the other men who came home from the war, as broken as you and a great deal worse—legless, armless, eyeless, with shattered nerves and devastated bodies . . . men who didn't have a mother like yours to come home to, who didn't come home to every luxury and beauty and comfort, who didn't have anyone or anything. Men out of jobs. Men in hospitals. The real wreckage of the war. . . . Think what you have in comparison to them."

He winced back as if she had struck him.

"How you must hate me!" he said, involuntarily, almost in a whisper.

"I don't hate you," she flung back at him. "If I did I wouldn't take all this trouble! If I did I—well, you wouldn't see me again, that's all! But it makes me tired, now that I've lived here in the house all these weeks and seen—what I've seen. Even if you can't really enter into your mother's plans for Christmas, you might at least pretend a little—it couldn't hurt you and it would make her happy!"

"I suppose," Lorrimer answered, after a moment, and he was perfectly white, so white that Mary Lou's heart misgave her. What if she had overstepped the limit! She and Mrs. Lorrimer and Dr. Mathews had often talked over the possible wisdom of giving Lorrimer a shock, of trying to shock him back to himself by sheer brutality of truth. F it how white he was! "I suppose," he repeated, "you think me a pretty poor specimen. And naturally, I'm not fool enough to think that my experience was worse than any other man's nor as bad as that of many. But if I've become 'ingrown,' as you call it, why a lot of it was up to you—if I didn't care to get well, didn't care if I lived or died—it was considerably your fault . . ." said Lorrimer.

"Mine?" cried Mary Lou, almost forgetting her role for a moment. "Mine?"

"I loved you," he said somberly, "and you told me you loved me. I took that knowledge back to the front with me, it sustained me through all that happened afterwards, through the long weeks in the prison camp. The knowledge of your love. That you belonged to me. That after it was all over we would be together again. For always."

It took all her diplomatic chatter to win him back.

DAILY TRUE STORY—Girl's Decision

The big aviation field was lined with spectators when the silver-winged plane failed to flatten out its screaming nose dive.

"He's going to crash—sure as fate!" exclaimed John Deming.

Marcia Thorton screamed and hid her face against the comforting solidity of John's shoulder and covered her ears with her hands in an attempt to shut out the horrified exclamations of the crowd.

There was a terrible crash as the plane struck the ground and from the tangled mass of wreckage flames shot out.

"Steady, dear. It's all in the game, you know," John reassured her.

He led her to his car, blaming himself for his lack of foresight. What a chump he was! Might have known there would be a crash with all of that stunt flying going on.

As he drove away from the scene of the tragedy he cast a furtive glance at the girl sitting by his side. The color had returned to her cheeks.

"I'm such a goose!" she apologized contritely. "But that poor aviator—" she broke off, shuddering at the unpleasant memory.

Gives Advice

"You're nothing of the sort," contradicted John. "It sort of got me, too."

Marcia looked at him and her soft red lips tightened to a thin determined line.

"That settles it, John Deming! You're not going to give up your nice safe job as buyer in Shelp's store, just to be an aviator."

"Be reasonable, Marcia," pleaded John. "Just because that fellow couldn't handle his ship is no sign that I'll crack up."

"You heard me!," was the relentless answer. "Be reasonable yourself, John. Think of what it would mean to me—if anything happened to you."

"Nothing will happen to me," expostulated John as he stopped the car in front of Marcia's home.

"Either stick to a safe job—or our engagement is off," and after delivering her ultimatum, Marcia got out of the car and started for the house.

John hurriedly followed his fiancee up the steps of the broad verandah. "Think of what you're saying, Marcia. Surely you don't mean that!"

Marcia paused on the top step and faced him, her blue eyes flaming. "You're extremely selfish, John—or you would see things my way."

"If I gave in to you and spent the rest of my life in that dinky job where there's no future—you'd hate me. I want a man's job," he retorted. "Perhaps I'd better quit my job as buyer. It is rather dangerous. I might drop a bolt of silk on my foot. I might take up knitting. Or would the needle hazard be too great?" he asked caustically.

"That's enough to show that you don't really love me," snapped Marcia.

Engagement Broken

She angrily snatched a solitaire from her finger. "Here! Take it! I'm through!"

And John found himself dazedly staring at the ring in his hand. Marcia dashed into the house, slamming the door with a finality that told John further argument was useless. He walked stiffly out to his car and drove away.

Confident of his ability to patch up their quarrel, John called at Marcia's home the next evening. The girl's mother met him at the door, her kindly face troubled.

"It's no use, John. Marcia won't see you unless you promise to give up aviation. It's Marcia's right to make such a decision—so I won't interfere," explained the motherly, white-haired woman.

"Very well," replied John and returned to his car.

It was an ideal night for lovers, but the warm, scented dusk of June was wasted upon him as he drove away, grimly thinking that the next peace overture must come from Marcia.

He missed her terribly during the ensuing weeks, but held stubbornly to his purpose. All of his spare time was spent in the air, to get the number of flying hours required for his pilot's license.

His skill in handling a plane attracted the favorable attention of airport officials. Soon after passing his examinations, John was offered the position of salesman with a local aeroplane manufacturing concern.

Excellent Salesman

He plunged into his new duties with a vim that won him an enviable sales record. He had neither seen nor communicated with Marcia since the quarrel. Vainly he tried to forget the girl whom he loved—but the winsome image of the slender, auburn-haired Marcia danced like a mischievous sprite in the foreground of his memory.

Success, honor, ambition—all seemed mocking phantoms that beckoned him away from the dearest thing in life. He realized the truth of the saying that memories were everlasting flowers gathered from the garden of experience. For Marcia would always be enshrined in his thoughts and life without her would be a dreary impossibility. Like a traveler standing at the junction of two divergent roads, John knew that he must make his choice. One way pointed to the girl of his dreams—and humdrum routine that he hated. In the opposite direction lay a successful future in the work that he loved—and loneliness.

John sighed and pulled back upon the stick of the plane which he was demonstrating to a passenger prospect. It would be hard to give up flying. It hurt to think of never again experiencing the senses of freedom that came only to one not earthbound. He would miss the smooth, powerful drone of the motor whose steady heart beats made flight a joyous thing. Two thousand feet below him lay the gorgeous, vari-colored panorama of autumn landscape misty with the blue haze of Indian summer, a picture of beauty that intensified his sense of loss as he made his decision. For he knew that he could never be happy without Marcia.

Amazed at Sight

That evening, John called at Marcia's home for the first time since the quarrel. Marcia's mother opened the door in answer to his knock.

"Come in, John. Marcia will be down in a moment," she said.

She led the way into the comfortable living room, then pleaded household duties and left him alone.

John paced nervously back and forth while waiting. Perhaps he had waited too long. Did Marcia still love him? Would she—

"How do I look, John?" inquired a familiar voice, interrupting his troublesome thoughts.

He whirled on his heel and stared unbelievingly at the trim, boyish figure dressed in flying togs.

"Marcia!" he gasped.

"I've changed my mind, John. I'll never interfere with your work again—I—I—thought that if — you still wanted me, this costume would be appropriate for our honeymoon. Do you still want me, John?"

John laughed happily and took her in his arms. He did.

The Hoover damned the Wickersham
And cursed him for a vilyun.

NEW SOLUTION FOR THE [illegible] PROBLEM

"How to Improve the Theater" will be the topic discussed by J. Camphor Doakes tonight before the Drama League. Mr. Doakes proposes that patrons of the theater, beginning with the person in the first row right, turn, one after the other, and cry, "HUSH!" into the ear of the person next left. This routine can be followed, row after row, all evening, and will not only put a stop to disturbing gossip, but will distract and entertain those who are annoyed by the play. If the experiment works, Mr. Doakes will go further and see that theater patrons are equipped with window weights.

More "Irregularities"

Taxpayers Need a Leader Who Will Help Them to Get Under the Surface of Conditions.

Inferior grades of meat, bearing a false inspection stamp, substituted for the higher-priced material ordered and paid for by the city.

A $1,950 rug bought for Mayor Kline's office without asking for bids.

Contracts for shoes and macaroni awarded to high bidders.

Thousands of dollars' worth of the choicest fresh vegetables bought by the city at peak prices from the brother of a city official for the animals at the Zoo—vegetables and fruits, superior in quality to those furnished the unfortunate men and women at Mayview, and purchased without any attempt to secure competitive bids.

These are but recent additions to the vast array of evidence of "irregularities" uncovered by Sun-Telegraph reporters in hasty scratching of the surface of conditions in the Department of Supplies.

What lies beneath the surface? How deep does the corruption extend? Whom does it involve?

The people can only surmise.

City Council, the body to which they have properly looked for answers to the questions, has insolently rejected the plea for an inquiry. The seven majority members—the councilmen who are under the control of Mayor Kline—HERRON, CONNELLEY, KAMBACH, LITTLE, ENGLISH, MULDOWNEY and ALDERDICE—are evidently determined to resist every effort to pry off the lid. The citizens are holding their noses, but the Kline councilmen refuse to recognize there is a stench.

District Attorney Park offers no help.

It remains for the people to obtain assistance from other quarters. The chief need of the moment is for leadership. A golden opportunity is open for distinguished public service. Is there now no militant organization in Pittsburgh akin to the Voters' League, which rendered such yeoman's service in uncovering graft and punishing grafters a generation ago?

Must the people of Pittsburgh depend on women for protection from the plunderbund? Is the League of Women Voters to bear the brunt of the struggle?

What is perhaps the chance of a lifetime is open to a courageous inquisitor, a fearless prosecutor. The task that awaits him in the investigation of the mess in the city government may be unpleasant, may even be dangerous—for interests may be affected that are both powerful and vindictive. Yet the job should appeal to a bold spirit with high regard for decency in government and a passion for public service.

The people are not always ungrateful. American annals are replete with instances of honor and reward heaped upon public-spirited men that dared to challenge powerful interests who preyed on the public. For instance, a rather obscure lawyer named Charles Evans Hughes made a name for himself by investigating corruption in the insurance business, and became chief justice of the United States Supreme Court.

Pittsburgh taxpayers, outraged by squandering of their money, will certainly find, sooner or later, the leadership they seek for the job of municipal house-cleaning. The job is not going to be neglected.

A Dangerous Month

With a Little More Alertness March Can Be Made as Safe as Any Other Time of the Year.

A graph setting forth the average number of industrial accidents reported monthly in Pennsylvania during the last 10 years shows two months in which the curve rises sharply. The months are March and October.

The State Department of Labor and Industry asks us to "help knock off the peaks" by observing March and October as "no-accident months."

It can be done. The general reduction in the industrial accident rate since the inauguration of the safety movement shows what can be accomplished by education and preaching. All that is needed is to emphasize even more strongly than in other months the need of caution in March and October. If the employes of mine, mill and railroad are made conscious of danger, they will be careful, and March will indeed be a "no-accident month."

Don't Put It Off!

Pay the Federal Income Tax Now and Avoid the Consequences of Delay.

The old story of procrastination in the performance of civic duty is with us again.

One hundred and eleven persons were arrested Sunday in the Pittsburgh neighborhood because they had delayed in obtaining automobile operators' licenses. The annoyance to which they have been subjected because of putting off this duty is very much greater than the slight inconvenience that it might have caused them to send their $2 checks off on time.

There is another civic duty confronting thousands of people here—the filing of federal income tax returns. The return must be filed and the first installment of the tax paid not later than March 16.

Don't put it off until after that date, because the delay will bring unpleasant consequences. Don't even wait until March 16 because if you go to the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue then to make your affidavit and file your return, you will be caught in a disagreeable jam and may have to wait a long while before you receive attention.

Do it now!

Crookes, a Neglected Genius

By Archibald Henderson

In the history of radio-activity and the discovery of radio-active substances, so much popular attention has been devoted to such figures as Becquerel, the Curies and Sir J. J. Thomson, that the work of other very important investigators has been somewhat obscured. Among these investigators is Sir William Crookes, the inventor of the Crookes tube which was primarily instrumental in affording us much of the knowledge we now have of radio-activity.

This somewhat neglected scientist was a close observer, and one who, by instinct and patient reflection, was able to interpret the significance of phenomena which just happened to come under his observation in the course of seeking something else. One of his memorable sayings is: Residual phenomena are hints which may lead the man of disciplined mind and of finished manipulative skill to the discovery of new elements, of new laws, possibly of even new forces; upon undrilled men these possibilities are simply thrown away. The untrained physicist or chemist fails to catch these suggestive glimpses. If they appear under his hands, he ignores them, as the miners of old did the ores of cobalt and nickel.

William Crookes, born in London, England, on June 17, 1832, lived to the advanced age of 86, dying on April 4, 1919. His first important studies were made at the Royal College of Chemistry, where he became the assistant of Hofmann. Later he became superintendent of the meteorological department of the Radcliffe Observatory at Oxford. Although he was interested in many branches of science, chemistry was the natural field for the display of his genius. It was a stroke of fortune which called him to the post of lecturer on chemistry at the Science College, Chester.

Crookes has the honor of having discovered a new element, thallirum. From the residual phenomena associated with this research, he discovered the highly useful sodium amalgamation process of separating gold and silver from their ores.

Crookes is the inventor of the radiometer. Next his attention, as the result of former researches, was called to the phenomena of electric discharges through high vacua. He followed up the curious phenomenon; the fact that there remained in the spectrum of sulphuric acid a bright green not previously observed.

The invention of the Crookes tube, having a vacuum 20 times greater than that of any hitherto invented, had a wonderful influence upon the entire future development of the study of radio-activity.

Crookes made many inventions and discoveries; and for many years edited scientific journals of influence and importance.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Judge Ben Lindsey told me this story:

He'd had to sentence a Bad Man . . . a 100 per cent Tough Guy who'd been raising Cain for months. It had taken the police weeks to catch him and he'd threatened to bust any jail they put him in. Yet, after conviction and a little talk with the Judge, he hopped a train, unescorted, and delivered himself at the penitentiary, 350 miles away.

Sounds like Ripley, doesn't it? Well, believe it or not, that's what happened. How? Why?

"PRIDE," said Judge Lindsey.

"I put it up to him. I told him nothing could keep him from serving his stretch and he knew he deserved to serve it. And I intimated that I'd have to send a heavy guard with him BECAUSE HE WAS PROBABLY AFRAID TO FACE THE MUSIC. That roused him! He came back at me in a flash.

"'Look here, Judge,' says he. 'Do you suppose a guy like me that has faced mobs and pulled off the stunts I've pulled, is afraid to go to prison? Then you got another guess coming. I never needed no bodyguard to look after me when I was doing my stuff and I don't need no bodyguard now. I'm not one of those white-livered quitters. If I've got to go to the pen I'll go, AND I'LL GO ALONE.'"

And he went.

PRIDE sent that man up alone to face the music. PRIDE would have saved him from the pen—if it had been used in time. But we're only beginning to see that pride is worth using . . . that it works infinitely better than punishment, than fear. And most of us still don't and won't see—

FEAR—that was the god we worshiped, that was the lash that drove us, since first we scuttled down from the trees and out of the caves. Fear ruling our hearts, as it ruled the hearts of the wolf and the wild pig, the snake and the weasel.

Make people afraid!

Punish people!

That was our code. That is STILL our code. The old, bloody, stupid code of the jungle.

It works in the jungle.

BUT IT DOESN'T WORK IN MAN.

It doesn't work in man because he isn't a wolf or a pig, a snake or a weasel—not entirely. Hair and hide and bone and blood of the brute—but tangled in with it all, something the brute hasn't, a spark of the Eternal Flame. A spark that makes him partly god, as well as partly brute.

A man's PRIDE—there's the spark aflame. There's the point where a man stops being a brute and begins to reach toward God. You may not think much of his reach. You may think him a million miles from God. But you're wrong. There, in that spark—there, in his PRIDE, lies that man's hope of salvation.

Fear—that's the law of the brute. Punishment—they are the tactics of the brute. Punish a man and you'll wake the brute—in YOURSELF AS WELL AS IN THE MAN. And the brute in him will snarl back at the brute in you . . . and probably outsmart you.

But trust a man—appeal to his pride—and you'll wake the god in HIM as well as in YOURSELF. And the god in him will salute the god in you—AND PROBABLY SURPRISE YOU.

Try it. WOULDN'T YOU WANT IT TRIED ON YOU?

(Copyright, 1931, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Life Victorious

To life victorious all aspire,
The gleaming goal of high desire,
The dream that sets men's hearts afire.

Triumphantly their steps would go
Where in the breeze bright banners blow,
High joys of conquest they would know.

But in the end they understand
How victory waits at each man's hand,
His to possess his to command.

For life bestows on all this dower:
That each may learn right living's power,
That each may pluck truth's fragrant flower.

To live so every day may be
Aglow with faith and honesty,
This is the path of victory!

Text For Today And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. —Colossians, iii:17.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

The Road to Alimony

Looks as though lots of young couples get married these days just in order to get away from each other, evenings.

Before marriage, when she asks him if he loves her, it takes him an hour to assure her; after marriage, when she puts the same question to him, he merely mutters: "Of course. Pass the muffins." And lets it go at that.

Nowadays, when a man makes love to a woman in WORDS, and does it convincingly, she feels almost like paying him at magazine rates—and adding a bonus out of sheer gratitude.

There is nothing really the matter with love and marriage. They are merely going through the "awkward age," that awful period of transition such as a girl experiences when her hair is too long for a bob and too short to roll up in a "bun."

* * *

There is nothing quite so beautiful in this world as the look of mutual understanding, solicitude and tenderness in the eyes of an old married couple.

Those who smile at a flapper of 40 or a middle-aged Don Juan, don't understand that every woman secretly cherishes the belief that she is Ninon de L'Enclos, and that every man secretly fancies that he is a reincarnation of Faust.

When love sours on a modern man, he does not go out and purchase a revolver; he merely scratches one number off his telephone list and resigns himself to learning to smoke another girl's brand of cigarets.

Two-thirds of the seniors of a well-known university acknowledge that they would marry for money. Not mercenary, of course—but just figure that it is as easy to quarrel with a girl who can pay her own fare to Reno, as with one who would want alimony.

(Copyright, 1931, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Isn't It So?

When a wife reigns she sometimes storms.

A woman's line of least resistance is her clothes line.

There are no shade trees and hammocks scattered along the road to success.

Men may come and men may go but the lent-umbrella joke goes on forever.

A fool used to be born every minute. Now the average is about three to the minute.

When you confide in a married woman you are probably confiding in her husband also.

It may not be etiquet to precede the father of your best girl downstairs—but sometimes it is policy.

THINK IT OVER

Drawn by Hal Coffman.

A straight line is not always the shortest path between two points. The "easiest way" will not always get you there the quickest. The broadest and smoothest road is not always the best.

It depends on where you are going.

If you are heading for disaster, the route to take is the one ahead—the route marked Gambling, Booze, Dope.

If your destination is Success, Health, Prosperity, then take the Common Sense detour. You may not have much company on the way, but you will reach the end of your trip many hours ahead of those that stick to the broad highway.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 5.—Seventh avenue has supplanted its neighbor Lenox as the main plaisance of Harlem. Lenox still teems with color in all its chromatic wildness, but high stepping strutters of the Black Belt's "Who's Who" now promenade on Seventh.

Here are bay-windowed apartmen houses once occupied by wealthy whites. Trade is creeping in, but most of the business of the area is confined to Lenox. There is a mall running down Seventh avenue and on the sidewalk edges are spreading trees.

There are uniformed doormen and elevator boys and fashionable penwiper dogs along with white, lean Russian wolf hounds. The bon ton dresser of the strip is Eddie Manchester, whose clothes are last gasps. He is employed, incidentally, by a Fifth avenue tailor.

One of the feminine fashion plates is Nora Holt, a cabaret entertainer. She queens it to work in a limousine, swathed in ermine. Her nearest sartorial rival is Lelia Walker, of "Kink-No-More" fame. Then there is the big spending, easy going [illegible] realtors—John Nail.

On Seventh avenue is "The Wishing Tree," the heart of Harlem's Rialto, where colored performers gather in off hours. Among its regulars are the feather-footed Bill Robinson, the oolie-ee-low chanteuse, Adelaide Hall, and another sepia favorite, Ethel Watters.

Broadway had a half dozen so-called colored shows this season, but the complexions of performers were mostly white. The all-black and saddle colored are seldom seen. Indeed many Negro comedians are forced to use burnt cork.

And hair is mostly straight. Both men and women plaster it down and gloss it up with a mirror-like polish. Chorines, ponies and show girls use rouge, mascara and powder with the same generous abandon of their all-white sisters.

The most depressing block in the metropolis lies on West Forty-ninth street between Ninth and Tenth avenue. It consists of row after row of sleazy tenements and a sprinkling of smelly garages. There was not a happy face in the entire block.

From a morning paper: "The proprietor invited him into his cafe and personally served him with three heaping plates of spaghetti which he wolfed with a gusto."

The fine Italian hand-out.

He is one of the Broadway racketeers, an incongruously monklike aesthete with a silken voice. I met him years ago in the old Mandarin in Chinatown. From time to time he sends me initialed clippings of his particular poetic or prosaic fancy. Always they stress idyllic emotion. On an early errand recently I met him, just going home and a little sleepy-eyed. "You know," he said, "I was just thinking the yellowhammers and redbirds are flickering across the lawn down home. And it is just the time of day the perfume of magnolia is sweetest." It was difficult to imagine his hands are red with several reputed murders! But they are.

I wonder if other scribblers fly into a sudden rage at typewriting ribbons. Mine today suddenly buckled into a loop and refused to budge. Instead of calling a repair man I tried to straighten it out. As a result the machine carriage hobbles along for about five words, suddenly hiccups and races backwards. I have hit the blame thing with everything except the dictionary stand, my arms are smeared with ink to the elbows and I have a headache cut out for a hippopotamus.

After calming myself by skipping around the block and quaffing a soothing malted milk, I returned to find a special delivery from Ted Cook with a clipping by Beaunash in the theater programs. It read: "Our casual habits of dress and a national self consciousness about overdoing elegance lest we evoke risus sardonicus contribute to keep the high silk hat off its pinnacle." And now I am perfectly furious all over again!

Success in capsule: Bolton Mallory, editor of Life, was a young copy writer in an advertising agency when Life was peeling an eye for a new editor. He wrote a piece of advertising copy that struck the publisher's eye—and Voila!

I was city hall reporter in Dayton, O., and lived in quaking fear of a cherubic little man with a crisp white mustache and querulous voice who sat at the entrance to the business office. Every editorial worker had to pass him. I used to breeze by like greased lightning. One day he inquired of the business manager at an adjoining desk: "Who is that quick stepping lad?" Two days later I was city editor at $17 a week and passes to the Victoria theater.

An odd remunerative sideline is carried on by a young haberdashery clerk. He can tie a black or white bow tie for evening with a flair few achieve. Rich bachelors prefer him to valets, send for him in their cars on auspicious occasions and he arranges their ties for $2 a visit.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Perhaps you are nearing middle age and slowing up a bit.

Your increasing weight, flabby muscles and heightened color show that you are losing vigor faster than you should.

As a young man you may have taken part in athletics.

But as you grew older you withdrew from any sort of physical effort except that which your daily work necessitated.

If your occupation is of a sedentary nature it means you take too little exercise.

There may come a time when you will regret having abandoned all kinds of physical exercise and the benefits involved.

You don't consider yourself as lazy, but isn't that just the reason why you have settled back to an effortless sort of life?

You are too anxious to favor yourself.

If every little bit of exercise tires you, you should realize that you need medical advice, even if you do not feel ill.

You started life with a good constitution and should have a vigorous middle age and still be interested in some kind of physical sport.
